Nazi Asks Death Of All Enemies In Treason Purge

Drastic Penalties Asked for Opponents of Hitler Principles.

'Clerical Meddling' In Politics Flayed

Unrest Over Distressing Economic Conditions Growing.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Berlin, Aug. 2.—Germany's campaign against "enemies of the state"—Jews, confessional front Catholics and Protestants, Stahlhelm war veterans and Communists—stiffened today with demands for the death penalty for all opponents of the Nazi regime.

Advocating that "offenses against the state" should be termed "treason against the people," Roland Freisler, undersecretary in the ministry of justice, urged the most drastic penalties yet contemplated in the third Reich. His expression carried no official weight, but some saw it as the logical culmination of recent trends.

Writing in the Deutsche Juristen Zeitung, Freisler suggested the new criminal code now under preparation should contain as an innovation the "treason against the people" conception.

Even More Heinous.

"Crimes of this kind (anything not in accord with strict Nazi principles)," he said, "should be considered more heinous even than treason against the state."

"The Nazi movement and its officers must be protected against anti-Nazi attacks," Freisler said. "The Nazi movement is the main institution of new Germany.

"The majority of cases of treason against the people should be punished by death. The minimum penalty should provide for outlawing offenders.

"In principle treason can be committed only by Germans. This definition is not in accordance with the general Nazi definition of 'blood race,' but it implies citizenship. Therefore treason against the people committed by foreigners and citizens not German in the Nazi sense of the word should be punished by special provisions."

Catholics Warned.

The Nazi regime will use all instruments at its command against Catholics antagonistic to National Socialism, Robert Wagner, staathalter (Reich commissioner) for Baden, asserted tonight in an address before 70,000 enthusiastic supporters of the Third Reich at Karlsruhe.

Wagner said:

"He who in the future attacks National Socialism—the philosophy of the German nation—is our enemy.

"He will be treated as such.

"We are able no longer to indulge in clemency.

"We shall tolerate no more meddling with politics."

Wagner, one of the foremost national leaders in the Third Reich, assailed foreign newspapers for their accounts of events in present-day Germany.

He accused the Catholics of supplying "part of the slanders about Germany published in foreign newspapers."

He said:

"Catholic Germans who have caused us to be slandered abroad are traitors to their own people. They ought to be hanged."

Wagner warned Catholics that the current campaign against the confessional front is but a foretaste of what is to come.

Newspapers Banned.

"We shall tolerate no more Catholic political newspapers, news organizations or workers' unions," he thundered as his audience roared acclaim.

The continued campaign against state enemies included:

At Coblenz, Baron Hermann von Lueninck, president of the Rhineland, dissolved the Catholic war veterans' organization "because it is an influence tending toward disharmony among the people."

At Braunsberg, in East Prussia, a summary court sentenced a Catholic prelate, H. Schultz, to prison for eight months. Two priests, F. Hoppe and W. Sauermann, were sentenced to six and four months, respectively, for

Leader in Fight On Psittacosis Again Stricken

U.S. Health Service Reports Dr. Hasseltine Gravely Ill on Coast.

Dr. H. E. Hasseltine, one of the United State's Public Health Service's foremost surgeons, is critically ill with a disease he has worked years to conquer—parrot fever. Five years ago the physician recovered from an attack of the same malady.

A laconic telegram, made public yesterday at headquarters of the Government's "microbe hunters," reveals that Dr. Hasseltine is at the point of death in the Marine Hospital at San Francisco.

Five years ago when psittacosis, or parrot fever, broke out in Washington on a serious scale, Dr. Hasseltine was one of the dozen doctors and attaches at the National Institute of Health who contracted the dread disease. He had gone near none of the patients nor even approached the laboratory where sick parrots were under observation, but he, as well as several other colleagues similarly cautious, caught the fever anyway. It is that infectious.

Dr. Hasseltine recovered completely. A few years ago he was sent to San Francisco to take charge of the Government's bubonic plague laboratory there. Then, when psittacosis cases began flaring up again, this time in southern California, he was given supervision of the Federal laboratory established in Pasadena to study the mysterious malady.

It is rare, if not unprecedented, for persons who have recovered from parrot fever to become reinfected, because of the resistance which has been built up in their systems. That is why the perilous assignment in Passadena was handed to Dr. Hasseltine, a husband and the father of three children.

The supposition seemed to have been borne out, indeed, when the Pasadena research center was closed a few months ago and its head still had his health.

Early this week Dr. Hasseltine left his bubonic plague experiments in San Francisco to return to the abandoned laboratory and pick up a few odds and ends before shutting it down completely. Scarcely had he left the building than he became seriously ill.

Dr. Hasseltine, who was born in Vermont in 1881, has achieved noteworthy results in the study of leprosy and undulant fever, as well as psittacosis and bubonic plague. He spent four years in Hawaii in leprosy research. His experiments in

Tax Bill Sped In the House, Foes Routed

Score of Amendments Smothered in Floor Discussion.

Leaders Expect Passage Monday; Senate Group Has Recess.

By Robert C. Albright.

Weathering a blast of liberalizing and modifying amendments, the Administration's $270,000,000 "tax the wealthy" bill, bulwarked by overwhelming majority support, rode unscathed on the road toward House passage last night.

A score of attempts to rewrite surtax provisions of the bill, sponsored alike by Democrats and Republicans, were smothered in swift succession. Action was tantamount to approving the first title of the bill, lifting surtax rates on $50,000 incomes to 31 per cent, and ranging upward to a 75 per cent tax on all incomes over $5,000,000.

Voting on detailed provisions of the measure was reached late in the day, after outnumbered Republicans, who continued a withering assault on "share the wealth" features, had apparently won their fight to block passage tonight.

Final Vote Monday.

The Democratic leadership was reported to be willing to allow the final roll call votes to go over until Monday. To speed action, however, the House for the second day in succession was called to meet two hours early this morning.

The Senate Finance Committee, meanwhile, heard another procession of witnesses and a fresh barrage of opposition from business spokesmen, who contend the bill is a nullity as a revenue getter and can serve only to retard recovery.

A proposal by the committee's first woman witness that passage be postponed until next January to permit more mature consideration, was enthusiastically received by some members of the committee. The witness was Catherine Curtis, representing Women Investors of America, Inc.

Chairman Pat Harrison hopes to report the bill to the Senate about the middle of next week. Hearings were recessed until next Monday, and they will terminate on the following day.

One Change Planned.

But regardless of Senate changes, and many appear in prospect, House leaders were convinced by yesterday's decisive defeat of a score of amendments that the bill will pass the House largely as written by the committee.

Only one important change appeared certain—and this has the approval of the Ways and Means Committee—an amendment exempting gifts to charity from taxation up to 5 per cent of a company's income. A check showed the House had the votes to pass it over the President's opposition.

As a change in the normal 4 per cent individual income tax is not germane to the bill, attempts to bolster the bill's meager revenue by reaching into the lower brackets yesterday were aimed at the surtax schedule.

Revision Plans Vary.

Proposals ranged all the way from an amendment to apply the British rates, proposed by Representative Vito Marcantonio (Republican), New York, and estimated to yield $750,000,000, to an amendment by Representative W. D. McFarlane (Democrat), Texas, to start with a 1 per cent surtax on $2,000 to $3,000 incomes and at $50,000 to apply a confiscatory 99½ per cent rate. The first was defeated 69 to 16; the last, 50 to 11.

The McFarlane amendment, and another offered by Representative Charles V. Truax (Democrat), of Ohio, levying a 99 per cent confiscatory tax on incomes of over $50,000, were the nearest approach to Huey Long's "share the wealth" program put forward in the House.

The Truax amendment, which, when considered in addition to the 4 per cent normal tax on income, actually would have levied a 103 per cent tax, was defeated, 60 to 14.

The Marcantonio proposal, approximating the British surtax level, would have started with a 16 per cent tax on $5,000 to $10,000 incomes, and ranged upward to 75 per cent on $1,000,000.

Republican conservatives were not inactive. Representative John J. Taber (Republican), New York, earlier in the day had announced he would offer an amendment to

Roosevelt Sees Direct Relief Despite Works

$4,000,000,000 Available, but Program Lags; Jobs Absent.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Bit by bit, it appeared yesterday, the original plans under the Administration's $4,000,000,000 work-relief fund are being shattered as circumstances intervene to make the ultimate goal of sweeping clean the Federal direct relief rolls more elusive.

The latest evidence of this came yesterday when President Roosevelt conceded that in all probability there may be indefinitely what he described as a small number of persons on the Federal relief rolls. He insisted there had been no change in the policy to transfer all able-bodied direct relief recipients to work rolls and to shift the problem of the "unemployables" to the State and local governments by November 1.

This was the date set several weeks ago by Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins as the deadline for ending all direct Federal relief. This remained the goal, the President said, but he indicated that it may not be fulfilled due to a lack of Federal funds to create work and due to the failure of some of the State and local governments to make provision for the "unemployables."

The President contended, however, that if 90 to 95 per cent of those now on relief rolls were removed from them as close to November 1 as possible, the original plan would be substantially fulfilled. He indicated that such a result should be regarded as highly satisfactory.

Despite the expression of optimism which accompanied the President's indication that the plan to have 3,500,000 persons at work on projects under the Work Relief program and to shift 1,500,000 more back to the States may miss fire, many observers saw in the incident notice that the results will fall far short of this goal.

As far as can be ascertained the Works program is making slow progress, dreadfully slow. Although projected in January in the President's message to Congress, the

Leaders Plan Compromise Utilities Law

House's Lobby Inquiry Hears Bonnie Patton Defend Father.

By James D. Secrest.

Administration leaders on Capitol Hill yesterday indicated a willingness to accept a compromise Wheeler-Rayburn utility-holding-company bill rather than no bill, as the Senate lobby committee pushed its investigation to fix responsibility for the whispering campaign against President Roosevelt.

President Roosevelt expressed renewed hope that the bill, over which the Senate and House have been scrapping for weeks, may pass before adjournment, while Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, intimated the Senate conferees may agree to the House ban on Benjamin Cohen, Administration aid, at future conferences.

"If we yield on Cohen, it would test the good faith of the House as to whether or not they want a bill with teeth in it," he said.

Representative Huddleston (Democrat), of Alabama, said the House conferees would be ready to meet the Senate managers early next week, if Cohen is absent, and he expressed a hope, but not a prediction, that a compromise measure may be agreed upon.

"I won't say the House won't yield on section 11 (the 'death-sentence' provision)," he said. "But we certainly won't accept the Senate section. It's just plain crazy."

Roosevelt Ignores Case.

As the White House let it be known that no criminal proceedings will be instituted against E. P. Cramer, advertising man, of Plainfield, N. J., as the originator of the whispering campaign idea, the Senate lobby committee uncovered a letter, signed by G. G. Walker, assistant to C. E. Groesbeck, chairman of Electric Bond & Share Co., characterizing Cramer's suggestion as "very pertinent."

Groesbeck in a statement Thursday said he had never heard of Cramer and ridiculed the suggestion that utilities had instituted the whispering campaign in an effort to discredit the New Deal.

The House Rules Committee, still trying to take the spotlight away from the Senate, meanwhile produced witnesses to substantiate the story of Representative Patton (Democrat), of Texas, that the most he got out of a Texas utility executive was a box of cigars.

Patton's comely daughter, Bonnie, and his nephew, Norris Shook, took the stand to insist that the mysterious package which Patton took from the room of John W. Carpenter, president of the Texas Power & Light Co., at the Mayflower Hotel was a box of cigars of a well known brand.

Testimony Discredited.

Both witnesses discredited the testimony of E. V. Sellers, NRA employe, who had left the impression with the Senate lobby committee that the box did not contain cigars. Sellers had quoted Shook as saying in a conversation about the box: "Hell, that wasn't cigars."

Shook denied that he had ever made such a statement and added that he had smoked some of the cigars. Bonnie, the 17-year-old daughter whom Patton said Sellers had obligingly taken to the movies, quoted Sellers as saying that he knew the box contained cigars be-

4 Die in West Virginia Storm; Lightning Bolt Cripples Town

Two Boys Drowned While Seeking Relief From Heat Near D. C.

Four persons were killed and the business section of a town was wiped out when violent electrical storms cracked a heat wave in central West Virginia yesterday.

Here in Washington the temperature reached a high of 92 at 4:15 p. m., four degrees lower than Thursday's high, but the humidity made the day extremely unpleasant.

Two small boys were drowned near Washington, 10-year-old "Buddy" Collins, of 423 Eleventh street southwest, in the yacht basin north of the Washington Airport, and 9-year-old Ernest Sherman in a branch of the Patuxent River near Savage, Md.

Of the four persons killed in the electrical storms in West Virginia, two were 10-year-old boys.

The youngsters—John Boner, of Shinnston, and Richard Altman, of Ocean Mines—sought shelter under the porch of an abandoned house and were killed by a bolt of lightning.

Orville Reed, 19, and Edward Reed, 20, cousins, blinded by lightning, were killed by a Baltimore & Ohio freight train as they walked the tracks at West Union.

Lightning set fire to the business section of the town of Hendricks in Tucker County, destroying several stores, a railroad office and the postoffice. Damage was estimated at $20,000.

League Intervention Is Delayed for at Least Another Month.

Arbitration Plan Again Put Forward

Mystery Wreck Causes Selassie to Guard Railway to Capital.

The Italo-Ethiopian Crisis.

Premier Mussolini accepted a plan evolved by Britain and France providing methods seeking to avert Italo-Ethiopian hostilities.

Il Duce today will order the mobilization of approximately 60,000 troops for East African service.

Plans for 50 Italian bombing planes to fly to East Africa were disclosed.

Emergency measures were taken to keep open the Addis Ababa-Djibouti railway after two Italian subjects were killed in an unexplained wreck.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Geneva, Aug. 2.—Premier Benito Mussolini's aim to revive the Roman Empire got past the despairing League of Nations Council tonight with British, French and Italian acceptance of a draft resolution forestalling league intervention for at least another month.

Ethiopia has not yet accepted the hard-won but feeble formula for saving the league and making the council feel it has averted war, which cannot break out until September anyway because of the rainy season in Africa.

Mussolini accepted all but the most important point—a time limit for tripower negotiations outside the league framework.

Anglo-French Agreement.

The plan which French Premier Pierre Laval and British Secretary for League Affairs R. Anthony Eden drafted after achieving a "Franco-British united front" will be submitted for council adoption tomorrow unless it is thrown down by Ethiopia. It provides:

1. For a council declaration favoring resumption of arbitration of the Ualual border clash on the basis of the Italian thesis—that frontier delimitations can not be discussed.

2. For a council resolution calling for another session September 4 to examine the entire Italo-Ethiopian situation.

3. For a joint Franco-British declaration to the council that negotiations to settle the entire problem will be started by France, Italy and Britain as signatories to the 1906 treaty recognizing Ethiopia's sovereignty.

The score for council negotiations:

Italy gains satisfaction in two particulars, that arbitration will be resumed on the basis of Mussolini's contentions and that three-power discussions be conducted entirely outside the league framework.

Britain Scores Twice.

Britain scores two points by fixing a time limit for conclusion of arbitration and by winning three-power consideration as preliminary to a council review of the entire problem.

Ethiopia suffers two reverses through council rejection of her contention conciliators must consider Ualual's ownership and through three-power negotiation under the 1906 treaty, which the Addis Ababa government never recognized because it divided Ethiopia into spheres of influence.

Mussolini's favorable reply was communicated to Laval by Baron Pompeo Aloisi, chief Italian delegate.

Laval announced the complete Franco-British-Italian agreement to Tecla Hawariat, Ethiopian minister to France and delegate to the league, and Gaston Jeze, his legal aid. He urged Ethiopia's acceptance of the formula, announcing a few minor changes may be made in drafting the final text.

British Secretary for League Affairs Capt. R. Anthony Eden said there should be no difficulty in settling a few minor points while writing the final text.

Police Hunt Pastor-Clerk In 3 States

Banking Company Employe Missing Four Days; Shortage Feared.

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 2.—Police of three States tonight were looking for Rufus F. Edwards, playboy and preacher, while auditors pored over his books at the E. C. Hook Corporation here, seeking to see if they show a shortage in the accounts of the former brokerage firm where he has been a trusted clerk for 11 years.

Edwards, one-time lay-preacher of the Methodist Conference, who once braved the Maryland hillsides to convert moonshiners to a way of righteousness, has been missing from the investment house since Tuesday. Since that time $50 in cash also has been missing, and it is on the basis of this loss that authorities over a far flung area are seeking the man who disappeared leaving a note asking forgiveness of his employer.

A warrant for his arrest on a charge of larceny has been sworn to by Edward C. Hook, investment broker. Police have broadcast a description of the heavy set, bespectacled man of 36 years, for more than a decade a familiar figure in the social life of this city and a daily visitor to the Hagerstown race track when the ponies were kicking up the dust here last spring.

His disappearance has set the town on edge, for in his capacity as chief clerk at the Hook Corporation he had access to books, if not cash of several leading concerns of this city. The money which he is accused of stealing was the property of the McComas Armstrong Insurance Co., found missing from the Hook cash register the same day that the one-time Virginia farm lad failed to show up.

He left behind two notes. One was to Edward Hook and the other to his wife. In one of them he asked forgiveness for his acts, intimating there was a shortage in his accounts. Hook last night, in an interview with a Post reporter, said

Matron Slays 'Witch' to End 'Fireball' Spell

Former Friend Surrenders to Ohio Police After Fatal Shot.

By the United Press.

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 2.—Mrs. Matilda Waldman, a staid, matronly woman, walked into the delicatessen of her former friend, Mrs. Ida Rose Cooper, and shot her dead today because she believed she was a witch.

Mrs. Waldman had complained to police that Mrs. Cooper had bewitched her with "fireballs" which for three years danced before her eyes, played about her bedroom and burned her husband's legs.

And at the very moment of the murder the husbands of the two women were in the office of the police prosecutor.

Mrs. Waldman readily admitted the slaying. She was calm as she underwent questioning. She was secure in the belief that her troubles had ended with Mrs. Cooper's death.

"She was a witch. I shot her. She witched me," Mrs. Waldman kept repeating. This was her answer to every police question.

Soviet Fliers Off On Polar Hop to U.S.

Rain Falls at Start of 6,000 Mile Non-Stop FFlight.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Aug 3 (Saturday).—Sigmun Levaneffsky and his two companions took off here today on their projected ononstop flight to San Francisco, Calif., across the North Pole at 6 a. m. (about 11 p. m. E. S. T. Friday), the Tass (Soviet) News Agency announced.

The fliers got away in their low-winged monoplane after intermittent rain, which had threatened to delay the hop, from an unanounced air field.

Co-pilot of the plane was reported to be George Baidukoff.

Before taking off on the 6,000-mile flight, Levaneffsky said if all went well they expected to be in San Francisco within three days.

CURED of an uncommon blood and bone disease after eight operations and 85 blood transfusions, 14-year-old Harold Pfleger prepared to leave New York Hospital for the home which he had given up hope of ever seeing again.

Pfleger, whose stout courage against almost insuperable odds has won the admiration of correspondents from President Roosevelt down, was ready to leave the hospital tomorrow, after having been a patient there since last November 26. "At first I was homesick," he said, "but after I got used to the hospital I didn't mind it so much."

The youth, son of an unemployed musician who is receiving home relief aid, was bright-eyed and cheerful despite the loss of his left leg during one of the many operations to check the spread of the disease.

He was eager to return to his classes in a Bronx High School. Later he hopes to become a farmer.

"I want to stay out in the open air for the rest of my life," he said, with a glance around the walls of his hospital ward.

The Holy Grail?

By the United Press.

A CLOUDY green glass cup, like a cocktail glass, now on exhibit in a dingy hall in the shadow of Westminster Abbey, may prove to be the Holy Grail—the cup from which Jesus drank at the last supper.

The cup, found during excavations in a cave between Antioch and Hamath, Palestine, last June, just arrived in London.

Resting in a glass case on a pedestal, the pale transparent green vessel has the place of honor in the center hall of the Bible Lands exhibition. Blue gold silks decorate the case and a bright electric light burns down on the fragile glass.

Authorities do not say definitely the Antioch cup, as it is known, is the Holy Grail. All the guarantee is its authenticity as an antique work dating from the last century, B. C. to the first century A. D.

4 Held in Raid as Nazi Spies Operating on French Riviera

By the Associated Press.

Nice, France, Aug. 2.—A huge German spy ring was being sought along the Riviera tonight after the arrest of four alleged members accused of prying into the secrets of France's Mediterranean fortifications.

The band, police said, is suspected of spying on forts and the big naval base at Toulon, using Monte Carlo as the base for their operations.

Authorities would divulge the identity of only one of the four arrested. He was Eugene Hahn, said to be of German nationality.

Hahn had been living with his mother at Monte Carlo since 1931, police said, presumably feeling safe from French police because Monaco officially is foreign territory. He also had a furnished room at Beausoleil just outside of Monaco, the authorities said.

Hahn's visitors and his frequent voyages put the French intelligence service on his trail. They occupied his apartment at Beausoleil, intercepted correspondence and arrested the other three.

The authorities said Hahn conducted the espionage ring's "post-office," other members bringing information to him which he coordinated and forwarded.

New "Devils Island" Prison Planned in Northwest by U.S.

By the United Press.

Another "American Devil's Island," similar to that Alcatraz Prison in San Francisco harbor, will be built on McNeil Island in Puget Sound, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings announced last night.

The Government will seek to condemn land on McNeil, Gertrudis and Pitt Islands and create a penal institution for three phases of crime correction, Cummings said. Only McNeil Island will be used for prison purposes.

Swirling tides ebb and flow from 10 to 14 feet around McNeil Island, creating a natural prison. The wooded island is 5 miles long and 3½ miles wide.

Criminals who are believed past reform methods will remain in the prison. Others will be placed in work camps. A third group will be given educational and vocational training.

Buildings originally developed as a farm center will be utilized for a modern work camp.

Still Harbor on McNeil Island will be developed to include a school, church, adequate dwelling houses and a central plant for heat and light.

Wheeler Warns Railroad Board On Refinancing

Senator Writes Official About 'The Insiders' and Senate Inquiry.

By the Associated Press.

A warning to the Interstate Commerce Commission not to approve any railroad reorganizations until the Senate has had a chance to see whether corporate "insiders" were trying to retain control yesterday came from Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana.

There were indications, however, that the commission would not depart from its policy of action on reorganization proposals as expeditiously as possible.

Meanwhile the Western Pacific Railroad yesterday submitted to the Interstate Commerce Commission a copy of its petition for reorganization under the bankruptcy act, together with a plan for reorganization of the road.

As chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee about to investigate railroad financing, Wheeler wrote Acting Chairman Balthasar H. Meyer, of the commission, saying independent bondholders' committees and investors had protested the pending reorganizations going forward until the Senate committee had "looked into and disclosed the underlying facts."

Commission Goes Ahead.

In authoritative quarters it was made clear that the commission considered its duty to be to conduct the prescribed proceedings on all reorganization plans submitted to it without undue delay. So far it has taken no final action on any of the petitions of 21 railroads seeking a re-formation of their capital structures.

In line with this attitude it was said officially that the commission's hearing of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific's application for reorganization would begin here Monday, as scheduled, notwithstanding Senator Wheeler's communication.

Wheeler told the commission that Joseph B. Eastman, Federal co-ordinator of transportation, had suggested every major railroad in receivership or bankruptcy be investigated, along with all in the process of reorganization.

Under the Western Pacific reorganization plan, the road's existing $49,290,000 of first mortgage 5 per cent bonds due in 1946 would be exchanged for:

$14,787,000 in new first mortgage 30-year 4 per cent bonds;

$17,251,550 in new series "A" 5½ per cent 50-year income bonds, and;

$17,251,550 in series "B" 50-year convertible 5½ per cent income bonds.

Federal Loan Proposed.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation would be asked to lend the road $10,000,000 in new funds for the reorganization.

The reorganization plan proposes to reduce the road's capitalization from the present $147,240,343 to $75,648,954 and 300,000 shares of stocks.

Fixed charges on the property would be cut from the existing $3,177,302 to $1,027,036 annually.

Under the plan $2,994,065 in the Western Pacific equipment trust would be left undisturbed.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Aug. 2.—A petition for reorganization under Section 77a of the amended bankruptcy laws was filed in Federal District Court here today by the Western Pacific Railroad.

Federal Judge A. F. St. Sure appointed the present management as trustee pending hearings before the Interstate Commerce Commission in Washington.

Rail Head Testifies.

Taking the witness stand in today's brief hearing, Elsey declared the railroad has made substantial reductions in operating expenses since he became its president in 1932. Salary of the president has been reduced from $45,000 to $25,000 yearly, he testified, and other major salaries were cut 20 per cent.

The reorganization petition showed total debts in excess of $71,440,345. This includes bonds, equipment trusts, leases and advances and deferred interest.

Total capitalization was set at $147,240,343, and approximate value of the road and its subsidiaries at $143,500,000.

Bullet Is Found in Brain Of Kansas 'Fall' Victim

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Aug. 2.—The death of a bedding factory worker who screamed and fell while at work became a baffling mystery to police tonight with the finding of a bullet in his brain.

Fellow workers in the basement of the Kanter Bedding Company, noting a head wound, believed it had been caused by the fall when they went to the aid of Arthur McDermott, 32, Tuesday.

No one reported hearing a shot.

But today, 24 hours after McDermott died apparently from the fall, a bullet was discovered during a routine autopsy.

Police were uncertain whether the man, who lived alone in a room in the building where the factory is situated, was the victim of a stray bullet or of a carefully planned slaying.

Who'll Answer G. O. P. Critics? Big Democrats Off Roosevelt; Rhode Island Election Watched.

By Raymond Clapper

ONE of the difficulties Mr. Roosevelt is bound to encounter shortly as the Republican drum fire warms up is a lack of heavy guns to turn on the opposition.

The Democrats who ought to comprise his main shock troops are off the reservation—men like Senators Glass and Byrd, of Virginia; former Gov. Ritchie and Senator Tydings, of Maryland; Newton D. Baker, of Ohio, two former Democratic presidential candidates, Alfred E. Smith and John W. Davis, and Lewis W. Douglas, all established Democratic leaders.

They are the kind of men who normally would come forward to answer the Republican attacks from Col. Frank Knox, Representative James W. Wadsworth, Ogden Mills, Gov. Harry W. Nice, of Maryland, and Chairman Henry P. Fletcher. But they are against almost anything Roosevelt has done and they are out.

The Administration has a shortage of loyal figures of sufficient popular prestige to effectively take on these increasingly rampant Republicans. It means that Mr. Roosevelt himself will have to do most of the answering. Either that or send into the fray such members of his administration as Wallace, Ickes, Tugwell and others, all of whom lack the popular appeal of those older and more eminent Democrats who were carrying the party banner while Ickes and Wallace were still Republicans and while Tugwell was in college.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Senate majority leader, is the only big shot with a long career in the political arena that the Administration has to throw into the fight. Though normally as hard as a 4-minute egg, he labors now under the handicap of being cool at heart toward many of the Administration policies and in addition of having a hard fight in Arkansas to come back to the Senate.

Senator Pat Harrison, once an ebullient campaigner, also is in the same predicament as Robinson. Futhermore, responsibilities as one of the majority leaders, have sobered Pat down. He is not nearly so fast on his feet as in the old care-free days when the Democrats were not in power and he was the Senate gadfly.

They look as unhappy as a man wearing flannel underwear in August.

The Roosevelt measures have so split party lines that from the bleachers you can hardly tell which are Democrats and which are Republicans.

Democratic Senate Leader Robinson points out that the Wagner labor-disputes bill, which the Republicans are assailing on constitutional grounds, was supported by Republicans like Barbour, of New Jersey; Borah, of Idaho; McNary, the Republican leader in person; White, of Maine; Capper, of Kansas, and Steiwer, of Oregon.

That prompted Senator Hastings, chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee, to list the Democratic votes against the Administration as follows: McCarran wage amendment to works bill, 19 Democrats; to displace anti-lynching bill, 18 Democrats; holding company bill, 18 Democrats; Clark amendment to social security bill, 35 Democrats; ratification of world court, 20 Democrats; and on various amendments to the AAA, Democrats opposing the Administration ranged in number from 18 to 40.

Democrats are waiting to hear from Rhode Island for some indication as to how the Roosevelt Administration stands in New England. A special election Tuesday, August 6, is to be held to elect a Representative in the First Congressional District. The Democratic incumbent, Francis B. Condon, has been appointed to the State Supreme Court. A Democrat, he was elected in 1932 by a vote of 70,429 to 55,940. He was reelected last November, 70,518 to 49,087.

Thus the Democratic vote in that district remained practically constant at 70,500 in the presidential year, and in the off-year. Both candidates this time are strong men. Republicans explain they are having trouble because so many of the well-to-do residents, the lucky devils, are vacationing out of the State and won't be voting. Democratic voters will go to the relief offices, as usual, election day.

One Senator who doesn't believe in the Administration's effort to forbid gold-clause suits is snorting over the compromise of Senator William G. McAdoo, which would permit gold suits to be filed on Government obligations during a period of six months following enactment of the bill.

"That's just a proposition," the snorting critic says, "to make the Government honest for six months."

cause he also had smoked some of them.

The House Committee also was informed that Representative Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, who took Patton before the Senate committee, had paid a lodging bill of Sellers here, amounting to $69.

Inference Ridiculed.

Miss Patton said that Sellers, after seeing newspaper headlines about the box, said:

"That's absurd. I guess I know that was cigars in the box. I smoked some of them myself."

Shook said he did not consider it unsual that "Uncle Nat" should buy Government bonds on his congressional salary, although Sellers had quoted him as saying that Patton "bought another bond today, and it wasn't pay day."

Leo Brennan, clerk at the hotel where Patton and Sellers lived, told the House committee about Blanton paying Sellers' bill and also disclosed that he gave Blanton a small parcel out of Sellers' room.

"It was a whisky bottle and contained only kerosene," Blanton quickly interjected.

Walker's letter to Cramer, which was made public by the Senate committee, began with an apology for a tardy reply and stated that Watson G. Harding and G. A. Converse, stockholders of the Electric Bond & Share, with whom Cramer had talked, had also written to Groesbeck regarding Cramer's suggested whispering propaganda.

"I am writing you today and sending copies of this letter to Mr. Harding and Mr. Colt to explain why you have not had a reply," Walker wrote after explaining that he was writing in Groesbeck's absence.

"I shall write you more fully within the next few days and take up the suggestions contained in your letter in more detail. They are very pertinent and I am sure you will be glad to know that in our immediate problem we have tried to pursue a course of action similar to one of your suggestions, namely, to point out the constructive force the utility industry could be in recovery if present persecution and the fear of future extinction at the hands of the Government could be removed."

President Roosevelt smiled when questioned about his reaction to the Cramer testimony at yesterday's press conference. With a chuckle he replied that he was probably the least surprised man in the United States at the testimony regarding the origin of the rumor that he was insane.

Asked if he would insist on the "death sentence" provision in the Wheeler-Rayburn bill in the face of unbending House opposition, he replied that was too much of an "if" question.

Eastman Urges Increased Use Of Freight Ads

Report Cites Small Outlay to Get Business From Small Shippers.

By the Associated Press.

Greater use of advertising and more efficient personnel in freight traffic departments were recommended to the railroads yesterday in a report submitted by Joseph B. Eastman, the transportation co-ordinator, to the regional co-ordinating committees of the country's railroads.

The report prepared by J. R. Turney, head of the co-ordinator's transportation service section, cited that railroads spent only $226,000 in 1933 advertising for freight traffic and urged an increase in such expenditures to stimulate freight business from small shippers.

It said that under present methods of direct freight traffic solicitation, the cost of obtaining one carload of business from transient shippers averaged $12, compared with the average cost per car on all classes of shippers of only $1.44.

The report found that 2 per cent of the total number of shippers were responsible for 47 per cent of the freight traffic, while 54 per cent were responsible for only 4 per cent. It said wider use of advertising would reach the 54 per cent at less cost and more effectively than the present method of direct solicitation.

Recommending a comprehensive reorganization of railroad traffic departments, the report presented a personnel study which showed the average employe terminated his education with the tenth grade and the best educated class in such departments was the stenographic group.

It showed the average age of officers of traffic departments to be almost 52 years and suggested that the establishment of higher educational standards and the introduction of younger men might increase efficiency.

It recommended the creation of a joint traffic development agency devoted to market research, traffic and industrial development for all the railroads, holding no one carrier could collect all the information necessary. It also recommended a simplification of tariff and rate structures as an aid both to the carriers and the shippers.

Rankin Fights Electrification With U.S. Loans

House Power Spokesman of Administration Sees Roosevelt on Move.

By the Associated Press.

Capitol Hill proponents of public power demanded today that there be no "compromise with the power trust" in attacking a plan to lend private companies Government funds for projecting rural electrification.

Representative Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, House leader of Tennessee Valley Authority legislation and nominal leader of President Roosevelt's unsuccessful attempt to swing the House for utility holding company abolition, promptly appeared in opposition to the plans.

Morris L. Cooke, rural electrification director, had indicated plans were contemplated to lend $95,000,000 at 3 per cent interest to a group of private companies.

The Mississippian, who said he was speaking the sentiments also of Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska, promptly went to see President Roosevelt about the matter yesterday.

Back at the Capitol, Rankin refused to discuss the Executive's attitude, but said "the President and I are pretty close together on the power question."

Rankin told Mr. Roosevelt it was understood that House members, at least, who had stood with him on the utilities issue were united against lending to private power companies "unless the control of those companies is securely reserved in the consumers.

"We can no more afford to compromise with the power trust that is now overcharging the American people one billion dollars a year for electric lights and power than we can afford to compromise with a rattlesnake," Rankin asserted.

He argued only the densely settled communities would be reached; that the farmers would be charged such high rates the plan would not be worth while, and that after 20 years "they will have been bled for enough overcharges to pay for these lines, which will then become the property of the power trust in perpetuity."

much relief in sight for sweltering Washington.

"Buddy" Collins was drowned in the yacht basin near the airport while playing with his 8-year-old brother, William.

Park police were told that the boy fell into the water from a small boat on which he and William had clambered.

Hearing the screams of William, a youth from a nearby Boy Scout camp ran to the scene and then sought help at the airport swimming pool.

Body Recovered.

Ray Johnson, 18, an employe at the pool, recovered Buddy's body on the first dive and carried it to the river bank. Members of the Fire Rescue Squad and a physician from Emergency Hospital tried vainly to resuscitate him.

The Sherman lad was drowned when he reached for a leaf that floated down the mill race near his home in Savage, Md. His companion, Frank Taylor, 6, looked on helplessly.

The tragedy occurred about 11 a. m. For an hour and a half thereafter, Frank wandered about sobbing, afraid to return home because of his mothers' warning that he should never go near the mill race.

Finally he went to Mrs. Gertrude Arbaugh, aunt of Ernest, and told his story:

"We played at the mill race awhile and started to come home. Then Ernest saw a leaf. He leaned over and fell in. I said 'Come on out.' But he didn't come."

Lewis E. Morris, of Laurel, Md., recovered the body. Acting Coroner J. E. Trobaugh, of Savage, issued a certificate of accidental death.

Preliminary plans were made at the Jewish Community Center at a conference of approximately 100 men and women representing Jewish congregations and civic groups.

Farm Approval Of AAA Seen in Tariff Threat

Roosevelt Cites Texans' Plan to Fight Barrier Before Courts.

By the Associated Press.

Agriculture's approval of the Government's farm program was seen by President Roosevelt yesterday in reports that some farmers planned to launch court attacks against the tariff.

The Executive said at a press conference that the contemplated action reflected the natural worry of farmers over the possibility that the AAA would be thrown out by the courts.

He argued that the price of cotton has risen from 4½ cents a pound to 12 cents, while wheat now brings 85 or 90 cents a bushel, compared with 36 cents.

Cites Rise of Income.

The farmers, Mr. Roosevelt said, are saving more money and paying more debts than at any time since 1929. He added that they had experienced eight lean years before that.

Spokesmen for a group of Texas farmers recently announced that if processing taxes were invalidated, they would start court action challenging the constitutionality of the protective tariff system.

Citing the argument of AAA opponents that the processing taxes are unjust because only the farmerms benefit, the Texans contended that the protective tariff benefits but one class and places a burden on the farmer.

On Capitol Hill, meanwhile, talk of a conference compromise on the Senate amendment to AAA legislation to permit processing tax recovery suits brought a quick threat from Senator Johnson (Republican), California, to "carry the fight back on the floor."

Discussion of a compromise emerged amid conflicting reports from one quarter that the Senate amendments had been accepted entirely and from another that they had not.

Afraid to Breathe.

One conferee on the hotly disputed farm measure said, "We are afraid to breathe," pending the return to the Capital of Senator Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, Chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee and one of the conferees. Smith has had no opportunity yet to sit with the conferees.

The compromise program was first mentioned by Representative Jones (Democrat), Texas, in a statement denying earlier reports the House conferees had accepted the Senate amendments, under which processors could sue for recovery of taxes if they could prove they were not passed on to consumers or producers.

The compromise proposal was to permit processors to submit claims for tax rebates to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in event the processing taxes were held unconstitutional through one of the many pending test suits. Appeal to the courts would be permitted only on law points raised, leaving the commissioner the power to decide the amounts, if any, to be repaid.

Johnson expressed his dissatisfaction to newspapermen on the compromise proposal, and Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, joined with a similar comment.

"I don't think the Senate conferees will agree to it," Borah asserted.

Extension of the cotton and tobacco control acts another year, as proposed in Senate amendments, was passed over, pending Smith's arrival, as was an amendment placing a similar control program over potatoes.

Counterfeiting Ring Is Smashed in N. Y.

Secret Service Gets Plates and Finished Money.

By the Associated Press.

Smashing of a counterfeit ring in New York was announced yesterday at Secret Service headquarters here.

Several arrests, seizure of equipment and spurious money were described in the announcement.

William H. Moran, chief of the service, said a special squad had taken into custody Ugo Albano, Albert Ravone and Carmine Coppola, all of New York, at High Nalls in Ulster County, and had confiscated a number of plates for the manufacture of $1 and $5 bills. In addition, he said, the agents seized $554 of finished money and $774 of unfinished bills.

Moran said the ring filled specific orders for counterfeit money and that this accounted for the small seizures.

Roosevelt's Kin Is Denied Right To Sue Reich

Claims Commission Rules Property Seizure Settled.

By the Associated Press.

Mrs. Katherine McNider Drier, a relative by marriage of President Roosevelt, was disclosed yesterday to have been denied the right to sue the German government for $600,000.

The denial came in a decision by Justice Owen J. Roberts, umpire of the German-American Mixed Claims Commission.

Roberts held that in view of previous commission awards of $298,000 to Mrs. Drier for seizure of her property near Dresden by the German government after the United States entered the World War, the case could not be reopened.

With this decision the claims commission disposed of the last cases before it growing out of war and post-war claims by the United States and American citizens. However, 153 alleged sabotage cases are still pending.

Final disposition of the sabotage cases hinges on the mixed claims commission's final award in the Black Tom and Kingsland explosion cases. Attorneys for both governments are still preparing evidence in those cases and no date has been set for the next meeting of the commission.

20,400 Cases Handled

During the 13 years of its existence the mixed claims commission has handled 20,400 cases growing out of World War claims and has made awards to American claimants in 6,841 cases totalling $274,000,000, of which $138,000,000 has already been paid.

Mrs. Drier, then Miss McNider of Montpelier, Vt., went to Dresden, nearly 40 years ago to study music and while there, in 1889, married Baron Georg Von Rosenberg.

The baron died in 1911 and bequeathed to his widow Bonnewitz castle at Pirna, Saxony, near Dresden.

In 1913 the baroness married John C. L. Drier, then in the American consular service in Dresden, and when the war broke out they were forced to leave their home and come to the United States.

The German government took possession of the property, treated it as belonging to an enemy alien, and it was finally sold by an administrator for 570,000 paper marks, then valued at $15,000.

Valued at $1,000,000.

Mrs. Drier went before the mixed claims commission with a claim that the property consisted of the castle and 210 acres of forest and agricultural land, valued at $1,000,000. In her behalf the American agent before the commission asserted it had been disposed of for a "ridiculously small sum" and sought an award for the actual value.

The commission made an original award of $48,000 and gave her the right to come befort it again if she was unable, through action in the German courts, to secure possession of the property.

When Mrs. Drier lost her case in the German courts the commission made her an additional award of $250,000, bringing the total to $298,000.

In her behalf the American agent filed a claim for $600,000 more and it was on this claim that Umpire Roberts ruled adversely.

The German agent previous to the umpire's decision, had made a tentative offer of $160,000 in final and full settlement but no decision had been reached on that offer at the time of the umpire's findings.

U. S. Will Drop Anti-Trust Suit In Steel Merger

No Appeal Is Planned on Court Ruling Allowing Big Company's Union.

By the Associated Press.

Attorney General Cummings said yesterday an appeal will not be taken in the Government's anti-trust case against the Republic Steel Corporation, the Corrigan-McKinney Steel Co. and four other corporations.

A Federal district court in northern Ohio earlier this year denied the Government's request that the companies be prevented from making an agreement allegedly in violation of the Clayton anti-trust act.

Under the agreement, Republic Steel was to purchase the assets of Corrigan-McKinney, including two subsidiaries. In return, bonds and stocks of the Republic Steel Corporation were to be transferred to Corrigan-McKinney for distribution among its stockholders.

The Justice Department issued the following statement:

"This case was brought in order that the agreement should be submitted to judicial scrutiny. It was fully tried, and, under the facts as found, the court pronounced the proposed transaction legal. In view of this holding as to the particular situation developed at the trial, it has been concluded that an appeal would be unavailing."

By the Associated Press.

Youngstown, Ohio, Aug. 2.—Republic Steel Corporation stockholders are scheduled to meet August 15 to act on ratifying the merger of Republic and Corrigan-McKinney Steel Co., of Cleveland.

Corrigan stockholders already have voted ratification.

Should the merger be ratified, Republic also will take over control of Truscon Steel Co., a fabricating concern.

Red Congress Adopts Policy Of Hands Off

Moscow Delegates Decide on Non-Interference Principle.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Aug. 2.—Delegates to the seventh Communist Internationale solemnly moved today to refrain from participation in domestic activities of national Communist parties.

Instead of interfering in the progress of individual parties, the executive committee henceforth must concentrate on matters affecting the international workers movements in a broad sense, the congress decided.

The delegates adopted a resolution intended to remove suspicions that Moscow is actively directing Communist movements in other lands, advising "arbitrary transfer of experience from one country to another" should be avoided.

Foreign observers here said the enunciation of the non-interference principle was of major importance, and of special significance in the light of the expected assembly next week when the congress will formulate its program of action.

Some apprehension had been aroused over a possible policy of interference, as a result of a recent speech by Sam Darcy, of San Francisco, American delegate, who suggested the Comintern organize international support for striking longshoremen in the United States.

The congress ordered removal of bans within the party to a rapprochement with social democratic workers and approved an appeal to the second, or Amsterdam Internationale, to join the movement.

Things as They Are

Proposed Excess Profits Tax Analyzed as to Its Effect on General Public in Wages and Prices.

By Samuel Crowther.

THE tax bill brought in by the Ways and Means Committee contains a new provision for taxing the excess profits of corporations. This may seem to be a matter of no consequence at all to the man or woman who works for wages or is out of a job. For there is no general comprehension that the taxing of corporate profits is the surest of methods of breaking down wage scales, disturbing the continuity of employment and raising prices to the public.

It is true that the present provision—like the whole bill—is but a gesture. It will not take effect until after June 30, 1936, and, anyhow, getting concerned over anyone's making too much money in these days is exquisitely funny. As a revenue-raising measure, the provision is, for the time being, meaningless. It is important as representing a trend toward barring recovery and toward freezing business, and therefore the general standard of living, at a low level. And its destructiveness may easily be concealed.

The word "excess" as applied to profits is wholly demagogic and is a catering to the notion that someone is unlawfully getting rich at the expense of someone else. High profits in sustained volume do not grow out of charging too much. Neither are they the result of paying too low wages. The gypper or once-around man may show high profits on a few transactions—but he can not show them over any period of time. He was never an important factor, and protecting against him is as futile as trying to build an absolutely burglar-proof house.

If profits beyond a point are to be taxed by the Government, then losses beyond a point ought logically to be insured. Such a proposal would today be dismissed as ridiculous. Yet, once having launched on a program of taxing profits under the delusion that at a given percentage they become excess, the refunding of losses becomes inevitable if the country is to be maintained on a productive basis. That, of course, means a peculiarly wasteful and clumsy form of collectivism.

The members of the Ways and Means Committee are intelligent citizens, and the majority members accept the collectivist bills presented to them by the Administration only with the wryest of faces. They have not considered the full implications of the excess profits section which they have tacked onto the provisions of the existing law. They are simply trying, in fagged, hopeless fashion, to bring in a revenue bill to meet a deficit which is galloping at a pace beyond the ability of taxation to catch it.

Ours is a profit and loss society, and high profits are not only absolutely necessary components of the system but also of infinite benefit to the public at large and especially to that part of the public which, because it does not see itself sharing in them, thinks it well to destroy them.

Two courses, in general, induce high profits. The first arises out of the successful introduction of a new product in which the manufacturer has the advantage of a temporary monopoly gained by a patent or by being first in the field. Those who bring in new products more often lose than win, but the lure of high profits is the moving force of progress. If the pioneer wins and earns tremendously, the competitors come flocking and eventually the article is brought down to the level of a commodity.

The second cause of high profits is skilled manufacturing or merchandising on the basis of giving the biggest package for a dollar. This involves low prices, a low profit per unit of sales and an efficiency of man power which can be had only through paying high wages. Thus in either case the real beneficiaries of high profits are the consumers as such and the workers, both as workers and as consumers.

That is one side of the picture. The other has to do with preserving the continuity of production. The net income of the corporations of this country in 1929 was slightly over $9,000,000,000, on which they paid income taxes of more than a billion dollars. In 1930 the income was just short of $2,000,000,000 and the income tax was $700,000,000. Since then, American corporations have been operating at a loss—although in 1934 it would seem that the loss was not large. For the years 1931-1933, inclusive, American corporations as a whole lost more than $10,000,000,000 and their resources were further drained by the payment of over a billion dollars in income taxes. There is evidence that corporate profits as a whole since the war have been about absorbed by the losses during the depression. That is the way the profit and loss system works.

But suppose a paternal government had, during the prosperous years, in addition to the immense volume of taxes it actually took, decided that profits above a point were a menace to society and ought to be confiscated. In that case we should have had a general corporate breakdown in 1931. Would only plutocrats—whoever they may be—have lost in that breakdown?

More than 80 per cent of all corporate spending resolves ultimately into wages. During the years 1931 through 1933 the corporations of this country, although they were losing money, paid more wages out of their losses than the Government has been able to furnish through relief funds obtained by borrowing and taxation. Private business did easily what the public authorities have been able to do in a measure only with vast fuss and vaster waste.

Hitting at profits is well enough—but one ought to know who is being hit.

By the United Press.

Rome, Aug. 2.—Premier Benito Mussolini tomorrow will mobilize two additional regular army divisions and two divisions of the Black Shirt militia for war service in East Africa.

New mobilizations will rally approximately 60,000 men to the colors. With their dispatch to Eritrea and Italian Somaliland, Mussolini's forces on the Ethiopian frontier will total nearly 250,000 men.

Tomorrow's communiques reportedly will announce new Italian naval construction.

Mussolini prepared further mustering of Italy's arms while France and Britain announced a "united front" in Geneva.

Their "front" designed to effect a complete League of Nations examination of the Italo-Ethiopian conflict in September reportedly aroused Il Duce's ire.

Italian resentment over international interference in the Italo-Ethiopian dispute was manifest in press comments attacking yesterday's House of Commons speech in which Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare lined up Britain with the United States in defense of post-war treaties.

Giornale D'Italia, foremost Rome Fascist organ, called Hoare's speech "malevolent, irreconciliable and almost menacing."

50 Bombing Planes May Go to Africa

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Aug. 2.—Plans for the greatest mass flight in history, with at least 50 bombing planes flying to Africa, were disclosed tonight by aeronautical circles, shortly after authoritative assertions had been heard that Italy would not let the League of Nations compromise her program in the region of Ethiopia.

The flight of the bombing fleet to Africa would exceed both in distance and number of planes the longest hop made by Balbo's squadron in its mass flight of 25 planes to the United States in 1933. The longest hop on that flight was 1,500 miles, from Iceland to Labrador.

The planes, it was understood, would take off from southern Italy early in September and fly without armaments, thereby averting any question of a political issue with any neutral countries over which the armada might pass.

Armament for the planes, it was said, has been shipped to East Africa.

Among Fascist circles tonight there were circulating what was purported to be the hitherto undisclosed text of Mussolini's speech to a Blackshirt Division July 6.

Excerpts widely quoted here tonight included, "You will conquer Ethiopia. You will have the whole of it. We shall not be content with a partial settlement. You will have formidable arms which no one suspects. You are strong, invinsible. You will see five continents bow and tremble before Fascist power."

Hoppe denounced the police report of the affair as untrue.

Intensification of Nazi campaigns was accompanied by further efforts to cope with popular unrest arising from distressing economic conditions.

Model Living Quarters.

The labor ministry appropriated 35,000,000 marks ($20,000,000) for model living quarters in Berlin slums. The fund will subsidize construction of apartment houses. It will be followed with appropriations to other cities ready to construct model settlements in industrial areas.

Receiving reports that German fodder crops this year exceed last year's, the government raised oil seeds prices to induce farmers to feed German fodder to their cattle. Most of the oil seeds on which cattle have been fed have been imported. Increased oil seeds prices make them prohibitive.

Berlin, Aug. 2 (AP).—Start of a campaign to restrict foreign correspondents and a statement from the propaganda ministry that it is "self-evident" that in Berlin and the entire Reich "there is complete order" marked the first anniversary today of Adolf Hitler's rise to supreme leadership in Germany.

A campaign by the German propaganda ministry against foreign correspondents who incur its displeasure claimed as its first victim today Ernest Klein, of the Basle, Switzerland, Nachrichten, a Protestant newspaper. He was ordered out of Germany within five days. Klein's expulsion is expected to lead to increasingly difficult times for foreign correspondents.

Pilgrims from all parts of the Reich flocked today to the Tannenberg Memorial to pay, on the first anniversary of Paul von Hindenberg's death, their respects to the war-time marshal's memory.

Hans Kerrl, dubbed the "German Pope" by the rank and file of the people, started functioning today as minister of religious affairs by depriving the Hannover Lutheran Church of its financial independence. He decreed the establishment of a special finance department, headed by Dr. Carstes, of Kiel, a Nazi German Christian.

Woman Offers Truce In War on Signs

By the Associated Press.

Colorado Springs, Colo., Aug. 2.—Mrs. Carrie Newton's single-handed war on "no parking" signs ended abruptly, if only temporarily, today in a truce with police.

Kept in a padded cell all night because she battered out windows in the matron's quarters of the city jail with the legs of a chair, Mrs. Newton, 55-year-old bill collector, carried on a vocal demonstration into the early hours.

Finally, she agreed that if released until a disturbance charge against her is heard she would refrain from molesting traffic signs.

She made no promises, however, that her campaign against reserved parking zones would end permanently.

Mrs. Newton was arrested on a charge of "malicious mischief" after she capped a series of forays through the downtown district in search of "no parking" signs by going to a bus company's office where a sign had been moved upon the sidewalk for safety and attempting to drag it away behind her car.

Four Witnesses Identify Zenge As Mutilator

Suspect Denies Brutal Slaying of Kidnaped Doctor; Father Sees Son.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 2—Mandeville Zenge, towering young Missourian, was identified by four witnesses today as the man who fled from the scene of the fatal emasculation of Dr. Walter J. Bauer.

Capt. Daniel Gilbert announced that Charles Mantel, night watchmen at a parking lot near the alley where the professor was brutally mutilated with a pen knife early Wednesday, and Herman Eichner, a newsboy who was bowled over by the fugitive, were positive in their identification.

He also reported that Harold and Harry Anderson, filling station attendants, had stated Zenge resembled the man who rolled a car bearing Dr. Bauer into their driveway and then vanished in the night.

But the dour youth steadfastly denied knowledge of the death of the doctor who had wooed and won the girl the prisoner had courted for seven years.

Father Pleads With Son.

An anonymous tip led to his arrest on a far West Side street early today. He gave a fictitious name. His father, J. Andy Zenge, a farmer from Canton, Mo., was brought to the State's attorney's office for a dramatic meeting. A sob in his voice, the elder Zenge cried:

"Yes—that's Mandeville."

"Tell the police everything," the parent pleaded. "If you are innocent of this awful thing, talk. We believe in you."

But the moody suspect declined to admit his identity until shown a photograph of Mrs. Louise Bauer—the brunette nurse who jilted Zenge on July 14, to marry Dr. Bauer. Lieutenant Otto Erlanson reported Zenge burst into tears—then lapsed into silence.

Mantel, Eichner and the Anderson brothers made their identifications late in the day. Then John Giannini, a cab chauffeur, identified Zenge as the patron he drove to Navy Pier Wednesday night.

Arrest Follows Hoax.

Giannini previously had told police his fare vanished in the gloom—leaving behind a blood-stained coat and a note setting forth that Mandeville was "going to end it all" because "I am so miserably unhappy over losing Louise."

Authorities branded the "suicide" a hoax. Their renewed search resulted in Zenge's arrest at 3:30 a. m. today. He wore nondescript garments purchased at a second-hand store, and had only $24.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles Dougherty said Zenge had given one answer—"I don't know"—to questions asked him since dawn. He reported the 26-year-old carpenter declined to state whether he had been in Ann Arbor, Mich. It was from there that Dr. Bauer said he was kidnaped by a man who subsequently, from photographs, was said to resemble Zenge. The abductor drove his captive to Chicago, bound him and performed the barbaric operation.

The elder Zenge retained Attorney Joseph E. Green this afternoon and indicated he would attempt to free his son through a habeas corpus writ.

Miss Adams—You said you wanted a small car to use in the mountains. Look at the Plymouth advertised for only $445 in the classified section today. It's a 1934.—Miss Hill.

Roosevelt Sees Direct Relief's End Postponed

Delay in Job Program Is Cited; Admits Rolls May Continue.

program has little to show in the way of results, aside from a large increase in the CCC and the replenishment of funds for direct relief.

For instance, the first specific allotment of funds under the highway and grade crossing plans, were recommended for approval to the President only last Tuesday. It will be another week or more before these allotments for Michigan are finally approved and perhaps another week or two will elapse before the State authorities can get the projects going. Thus it will be the eve of autumn and cold weather before the first of these projects gets well under way.

The President realizes the slowness of the program and he indicated yesterday he is struggling to speed up processes, regarded as necessary, that applications for funds must go through. The Comptroller General's office has become a bottle-neck, through which all allocations must go.

Speed Is Promised.

It has been necessary for the attaches of that office, in examining each proposed allotment, to check it against the provisions of the law. This is a slow process for the first allotment, but as the machinery speeds up the office will develop precedents which will facilitate the consideration of subsequent allotments.

The President explained that Comptroller General J. R. McCarl, who was his guest on a Chesapeake Bay cruise last week-end, had promised to speed up the clearance of allotments. Thus the President pointed out that once the program starts moving it should develop acceleration very rapidly.

Mr. Roosevelt was unable to state how many persons had been given work under the program so far. He referred the inquiry to Hopkins, who is out of the city. But Mr. Roosevelt felt fairly certain that by mid-October a substantial part of the able-bodied on relief rolls would be at work under the new program.

One difficulty in the Administration's path of clearing its relief rolls is the unwillingness or the inability of the States and local governments to take care of the "unemployables." Many of these governments are confronted with financial situations more serious than that of the Federal Government and they do not have the same credit rating as the Washington Government.

Legislators have been reluctant to assess more taxes and some adjourned last spring without making the full necessary provision for taking care of the "unemployables" that supposedly will come back to them under the President's program. Since the New Deal policy is that none shall starve, it appears that the Federal Government will have to continue the care of persons who cannot get help from their States.

Evidence that direct Federal relief may continue, at least for a small number indefinitely, follows on the heels of two other negations of general understanding of the original plans. In the beginning the works program was projected as a substantial public works program and many in Congress regarded it as such when it was projected.

But the arithmetic of the situation shattered that idea. When 3,500,000 is divided into $4,000,000,000 it is found, huge as that sum is, that so many persons could not be put to work at wages regarded as sufficient to provide a decent standard of living on projects which required any large outlays for material.

It also was believed when the Works-Relief program was first projected that it would be a pump primer which would make unnecessary huge Federal appropriations to take care of unemployment in the future. But that idea has been dissipated by the revelation that many New Dealers believe the Federal Government always will have to deal with an unemployment program—that as many as 5,000,000 able-bodied may be permanently jobless as far as private industry goes—and by the recent action of the President in directing a survey to show what unemployment appropriations will be required for the fiscal year which starts July 1, 1936.

Police in 3 States Hunt Missing Clerk

he was certain that the amount would not exceed $1,000. Hook was emphatic in his declaration that Edwards had but little access to cash handled by his corporation, which now acts as a "service" company, although formerly, before bankruptcy proceedings, it was an investment firm.

Edwards has long been known in this city. Until a few years ago he traveled considerably, occupying pulpits under authority of a conference ticket in the absence of regularly ordained ministers.

His eloquent sermons had been heard in Hagerstown churches, in Williamsport, in Berkley Springs, and in the tree-hidden churches of the back reaches of the mountain country. Once he invaded a region known for the preponderance of moonshiners and thundered the Word of God against lawbreakers. His sobriety among the townsfolk of Hagerstown was a by-word.

In their snug little home in Raven Heights, his wife declared last night that she felt he was shielding someone, but would not elucidate upon this remark. Police maintained a strict silence regarding the affair.

Edwards was a neat dresser, whose only known indulgence was a fondness for good cigars and a liking to place small bets upon the ponies. Friends said he was not particularly astute in the bets he placed last spring, often made up of his own and his friends' small change. He was always accompanied to the track by his wife.

His home originally was in Ripon, W. Va., where he was reared on a farm. His mother still lives there. Among the accounts handled by the Hook Corporation, and to whose books Edwards had access, were the Hagerstown Building & Loan Co. and the St. James Preparatory School. Hook is an officer of both institutions, but Edwards has no official connection with either.

Hook would not reveal the nature of the note left him, saying it had been turned over to the police. He did disclose, however, that Edwards had said he was going somewhere to start life anew and that he asked forgiveness of his employer.

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science Textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Love inspires, illumines, designates, and leads the way. Fire Destroys Wright Home At Woodside Boy, Feared Burned, Had Fled, Dreading Spilt-Salt Augury.

Mr. and Mrs. John Wright, of Woodside, Md., and their five young sons are homeless. Fire yesterday afternoon destroyed their home and possessions, valued at $7,000.

The fire, believed caused by faulty wiring or an overheated chimney, was discovered by 12-year-old Celestine Mormon, who lives with the Wrights.

She saw smoke seeping from the attic of their home on Grace Church road and ran to a neighbor's home half a mile away to call Silver Spring and Takoma Park fire departments.

When they arrived, the flames had gained much headway, and Johnny, the oldest boy, was missing. Firemen hastily spread a wall of water in the house, rushed in and scoured the place for Johnny but he couldn't be found. While they feared he had been trapped in the attic, Byron Sedgwich, secretary to the county commissioner at Silver Spring, saw Johnny at Georgia avenue and Colesville pike, Sligo, and questioned him.

"I knew something was going to happen," young Johnny said, "I spilled a saltshaker and was afraid of a whipping, so I ran away."

Johnny's mother had put lunch on the table when Celestine saw the smoke, and a roomer at the house, Joseph Burns, helped round up the family, including James, 7; Daniel, 6; Joseph, 3, and David, 19 months old, and H. E. Peele, another roomer.

Meanwhile, the family cow, tied to a fire engine, managed to reach a nearby plot of grass and munched her lunch, apparently unmindful of what was going on nearby.

Montgomery Launches Inquiry On Storing Beer Outside County

Sale of Brew Increased for July and for First 7 Months of Year.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post.
1111 Oak St., Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Thorough investigation of all wholesale beer dealers doing business in Montgomery County was ordered yesterday by the Liquor Control Board of the county at a meeting in Silver Spring.

The board revealed that it had evidence that several of the wholesale dealers do not store beer in the county designed for distribution within the county.

The law declares that "it is unlawful for the holder of any license for the sale of any alcoholic beverage to store any beer, ale, porter or stout, designed for distribution in Montgomery County in any warehouse or storeroom other than one located within the confines of said county."

Laxity in making reports on sales in the county also came under condemnation of the board as well as several other alleged violations of the regulations.

The wholesalers under question will be haled before the board Friday to explain and if the allegations are sustained will face possible loss of license.

Mrs. Norma Martin was granted a permit for the sale of beer in a new restaurant in Rockville, Md., on the site of the old Dixie Tavern. Francis "Slom" Lyddane will be manager of the restaurant.

July was the biggest beer sale month in the history of the board, J. Oscar Foulk, general manager, reported. Profits on beer were $3,568.25 for the month. The first seven months of this year show an increase of $3,000 over the same period for last year, Foulk reported. Liquor sales in July increased $1,492 over the same month last year.

Allegations that a fight originating in his establishment at Potomac, Md., had halted President Roosevelt's party several weeks ago were denied yesterday by John C. Hitchcock at a hearing before the liquor control board of Montgomery County.

Hitchcock had been cited before the board to show cause why his license should not be revoked after charges were filed that he operated a disorderly establishment and that he had sold beer to persons who were intoxicated.

Witnesses for Hitchcock declared that the fight took place some distance from his store and that the participants were a married couple from Washington. They further declared that the presidential party was not halted by the melee.

Contradictory testimony was introduced regarding the peace and good order of the store. A number of witnesses charged disorder, while another group said the store was conducted as well as any other beer store they had encountered. A petition, signed by 80 persons, declared the establishment was run in an orderly manner.

The board took the question under advisement for further investigation and will not make known its decision until Friday.

Sheriff G. Edington Bell said that the promiscuous parking of automobiles around the store constituted a traffic menace. He said he had been called to the store several times for fights, but that it was at the request of Hitchcock. County Policemen Joseph Nolte and Riggs Griffith testified they had observed Hitchcock serve beer to persons who appeared intoxicated.

The condition of Margaret Peter, 11-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Peter, of Four Corners, Md., who is battling for her life from blood poisoning, was reported slowly improving yesterday.

The child, at the Homeopathic Hospital in Washington, was given antitoxin serum rushed by airplane from New York, when doctors had given up all hope of her recovery.

After the second injection of serum the child's temperature rose and she was put under oxygen. She rallied, however, and doctors believe she will be her normal self and back home in a week's time.

Henry O. Glock, 22, 723 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, Md., narrowly escaped death early yesterday when a milk truck he was driving crashed over an embankment on the old Sligo road near the Carroll avenue bridge, Takoma Park, Md.

According to Takoma Park police, Glock said he fell asleep at the wheel and lost control of the vehicle. He suffered a deep cut on the right side of his head and bruises on his arms and body. He was taken to the Washington Sanitarium for treatment. After a few hours he returned to his home. The milk truck was demolished.

De Witte Marbley, colored, Takoma Park, Md., was fined $50 on charges of reckless driving yesterday by Judge Smith at Rockville. He was also fined $25 for failing to keep on the right side of the road, but this fine was suspended.

The offender had a head-on collision with Delmar P. Dyott, of Berwyn, Md., July 30, on Park avenue, Takoma Park, damaging both cars beyond repair.

An open competitive examination for the position of substitute clerk and substitute city carrier will be held at the Silver Spring (Md.) postoffice today. From the eligibles resulting from this examination, existing and future vacancies in the positions of substitute clerk and carrier will be made.

Virginia Couple Sought in Plot On Mortgagor

Montgomery County police are searching for a Virginia couple for questioning in the mysterious attack on Herman Rabbitt, cattle and farm land dealer, at Cloppers, Md., shortly before midnight Thursday.

Rabbitt had driven his car into the driveway of a new farm at Cloppers that he had taken on mortgage a short time ago. He noticed that the gate to his pasture was open as he drove in. He stopped his car and started to get out when a bullet narrowly missed his head. He started the car and fled and another bullet followed.

Rabbitt drove to the nearby farm of Chief of Police J. William Garrett and told the chief of his experience. Chief Garrett called for police from Rockville headquarters and told the policemen to stop anyone they met on the road from the farm. They met no one. Rabbitt passed the night at the chief's house.

Rabbitt holds mortgages on many farms in the upper end of the county and has foreclosed on a number recently.

The couple police are looking for is said to have written a threatening note to him regarding such a foreclosure.

Fairfax Wheat Likely to Draw 33-Cent Bonus

Taxes on Non-Co-operating Growers' Produces Swell Fund.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The farmers of Fairfax County who are co-operating in the 1935 wheat program are expected to receive about 33 cents per bushel on their contracts, according to the announcement of County Agent H. B. Derr. The 1934 minimum payment was 29 cents a bushel.

The increase is possible this year because of reserves accumulated from the tax on wheat produced by farmers not under allotment contracts, the agent explained.

Wheat adjustment payments for the current year will be made in two installments. The first is payable as soon as compliance with the contracts has been checked and will be at the rate of 20 cents a bushel. The final payment will be made when local administrative costs for the 1935-36 fiscal year have been determined and the necessary deductions made.

Although the final payments have been tentatively set at 13 cents a bushel, it may be increased if the difference between the average farm price and the wheat parity price for the current month is more than 33 cents a bushel.

Derr points out that the new schedule of payments applies to the 1935 crop, which is the last to be harvested under the original wheat contract. It has no connection with the new contract, which is now being prepared and will cover the four years from 1936 to 39, inclusive.

Dr. Jessie Thornton Scott, of Vienna, was re-elected president of the Medical Society of Fairfax County at a meeting at the home of Dr. William Meyer in Herndon.

Dr. John P. Smallwood, of Falls Church, was selected as delegate, with Dr. Meyer as alternate, to the State medical convention at Norfolk in October.

An all-day meeting will be held tomorrow by the Methodist Episcopal Church South at Pleasant Valley in Fairfax County.

The meeting will open with the regular morning service when the Rev. J. Howard Wells, D.D., presiding elder of the Washington district, will deliver the sermon.

At noon an old-fashioned outdoor luncheon will be held in the grove adjoining the church. Beginning at 2:30 p. m. a song service will be held, followed by an afternoon service conducted by the Rev. J. J. Rives, pastor of the Emory Methodist Church, Washington.

Miss Devers Is Married At Ft. Myer

She Becomes Bride of Lieut. Graham in Chapel Ceremony.

Arrangements Rushed Due to Transfer of Officer.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

A charming wedding took place last night at Fort Myer, Va., when Miss Frances Lyon Devers, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Jacob Louks Devers, was married to Lieut. Alexander Graham, of the Sixteenth Field Artillery, Fort Myer. Chaplain Ralph C. Deibert performed the ceremony.

All preparations for the wedding were made in the last five days, but there was no evidence of hurry in the beautiful wedding scene in the Fort Myer Chapel. Arrangements had to be rushed because Lieut. Graham was suddenly ordered to West Point, to report today, and Col. Devers' regiment, the Sixteenth Artillery, of which all of the men in the wedding party are members, had marching orders for 8 o'clock this morning.

Bride Wears White Satin.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a gown of white satin, with a white tulle veil over lace, which had been worn by her grandmother and her mother. She carried a bridal bouquet.

Miss Jean Shuler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George K. Shuler, was Miss Devers' only attendant. Miss Shuler wore a frock of gold taffeta, a red velvet hat and carried red roses.

Lieut. Beverly D. Jones served as best man, and the ushers were Lieuts. David G. Erskine, Frank S. Henry, John C. Seaman, Richard E. Weber, Marshall W. Frame and Henry King. The bridegroom, best man and ushers all wore blue mess jackets and carried sabers.

After the ceremony the bride and bridegroom passed under the traditional arch of sabers on the chapel steps.

Reception Held at Home.

A reception was held at the Devers home after the ceremony. Lieut. Graham and his bride left last night for West Point, where they will remain until August 21, when they will sail on the President Harding for France. Lieut. Graham will pursue a course of study in French in preparation for his detail as an instructor in modern languages at the United States Military Academy at West Point.

Both Lieut. Graham and his bride are "army children." Miss Devers was born at Schofield Barracks, T. H., and Lieut. Graham, the son of Col. and Mrs. Alexander Graham, judge advocate general department, Baltimore, is Iowa.

The bride's mother is the former Georgia Hayes Lyon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lyon, of Hickory Hill, Langley, Va.

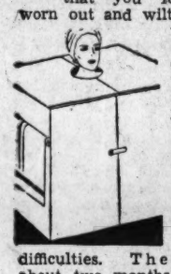
Downtown Establishment Also Rates High in Beauty Treatments.

By Dudley Harmon.

Pinch-Hitting for Ruth Anne Davis.



HAS MIDSUMMER cracked down on you to the extent that you feel perpetually worn out and wilted? Have you unwillingly gained a few extra pounds that you can't dispose of? Is your skin dull and lifeless due to sluggish circulation?

The chances are that you are haunted by at least one of these summer difficulties. There's something about two months of steady heat and dryness that leaves a telltale mark in sagging muscles and parched skin.

So we think you'll be happy to know that in the heart of the downtown section there's an establishment that will put the vim and vigor back into your bones. We refer to its complete treatment of Turkish baths, massages and facials.

There's nothing like a good, hot Turkish bath to steam all the impurities out of your system. You can literally feel all the poisons and toxic wastes oozing out of you. At least, that's the way we felt the other day when we sat and slowly baked in one for 20 minutes. After we stepped out, we were shuffled into a steam room, where clouds of gray steam enveloped us in a warm, purifying mist. This treatment is administered in two different ways, one to knock off those extra pounds, and the other to fill out unbecoming hollows and depressions. If you're the scrawny type, you'll gain little by little under the latter method, while if you've become unpleasantly plump, the pounds will drop off by magic under the first-named treatment.

And the cold shower afterward! It brought the blood tingling into our face as its sprays played up and down, stimulating the circulation. But the best part of all is the all-over rubdown administered by Blanche, the capable masseuse with magic in her fingers. Blanche has had years of experience, and know just where to rub and pound so those tired, flabby muscles are whipped into shape again. With scented balms and rich perfumed oils she rubs and kneads slowly and soothingly, until you find yourself sinking into a blissful doze induced by complete relaxation.

WHERE to buy cosmetics in this column? A new leaflet by Ruth Anne Davis gives the names of the shops. Address her in care of The Post, inclosing a 2-cent stamp.

Not only does this establishment excel in baths and massage, but it rates ace high in beauty treatments as well. The operators have had intensive training and long experience, and their facials, finger waves, and permanents are of the highest quality. One of the greatest drawing cards is their oil shampoos which accompany the Turkish baths. They rub oil deep into your hair and scalp, and under the clouds of steam, this oil dissolves and penetrates deep into the tissues. The effect is amazingly healthful and stimulating for hair which has become streaked and drab under a summer sun.

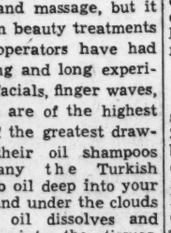
* * * *

The thought of having a permanent on a hot summer day probably makes you cringe, but if you have your permanent here, you won't mind it a bit. Instead of sitting around in your hot, sticky clothes, you are wrapped in a sheet, which you can drape loosely about you. As a summer special, this shop is also throwing in a shower after the permanent, so that as soon as your hair is done, you can step into its cooling, bracing spray. During August, the shop offers permanents at the special price of $3, reduced from $5 and $7.50.

The baths and massage also can be obtained at special summer rates. They cost only $2, and for $25 you can get 15.

Special in Face Powder.

THIS SAME store is offering something tempting in the bargain line this month. With every box of a certain brand of face powder purchased you are given an adorable little box made of paneled mirrors with French beveled edges. The interior of the box is silvered and the mirror top is enhanced by a scintillating, jewel-like ornament. It can be used as a cigarette box, as a jewel case or as a powder container.



The powder itself is a bargain at the price, even without the stunning box that goes with it. It's a well-known make whose name you'll recognize as soon as you hear it. Rich, fragrant almond is its base, which contains no starches or harmful chemicals. Because its particles are fine and soft, this powder has unusual clinging qualities. You need not worry about its vanishing as soon as you put it on, the way so many powders do. Another feature, swell in summer, is that it's absolutely moisture proof, so that no amount of perspiration can drive it away. It's so carefully blended that its ingredients prevent coarse pores and blackheads. Powder and cigarette box come for $1.

Underwood & Underwood.

MRS. MARTHA R. GOLD.

Mrs. Martha R. Gold, Who Worked a Full Year for Congressional Action, Gives Most of Credit to Colleague, However.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

TO MOST PERSONS reports of a new divorce bill for the District of Columbia simply meant the replacement of an antiquated measure recognizing only one cause for divorce.

But to Mrs. Martha R. Gold, Washington attorney, it meant a victory bought with a full year of the hardest work she ever did in her life.

"Yet it was worth every effort I expended," she said at her office yesterday. "I don't regret a single minute I spent digging into statistics, compiling data, talking to Congressmen and appearing before House and Senate committees. Naturally, I'm overjoyed it passed. It is the first bill in which I've ever been personally interested, and I know it will prove a constructive measure to the District."

Discussing details of the fight for the new bill, Mrs. Gold referred continuously to material in a huge envelope bulging with pamphlets, letters, press clippings and statistical references.

Home-Stretch Struggle

"This represents the home-stretch struggle of what has really been a 20-year fight," she said. "It's really been that long, you know, since residents in the District first began trying to get a more liberal divorce law. Only in the last year, however, has much progress been made toward the goal."

Modestly, Mrs. Gold emphasized that she had not been, in any sense, the sole motivating force. She explained she had merely represented the legislative committee of the Women's Bar Association and had worked with Mr. George C. Gertman, secretary of the Men's Bar Association and chairman of its legislative committee.

"Mr. Gertman deserves most of the credit," she said. "Never in my 25 years in public life have I worked with a more splendid, more efficient man. What has been accomplished has been due largely to his efforts."

The regard in which Mr. Gertman, in turn, holds Mrs. Gold was borne out in a letter to her recently. It read, in part:

"Having just learned we are about to get a new divorce law, which was brought about largely through your untiring efforts, perseverance and individuality, I hasten to congratulate you on our joint achievement.

"I feel, as I have always stated to you, that an effort by me to procure singly the enactment of the bill would have been futile without your assistance."

Long Interested in Issue.

Mrs. Gold first become interested in working for a more liberal divorce measure for the District about 12 years ago.

"When I was studying at the Washington College of Law," she said, "I discovered that the District of Columbia law was inadequate and encouraged fraud, perjury and collusion."

At that time, while attending law school at night, she was secretary to Senator George H. Moses, of New Hampshire. In 1925, she finished her law course, but continued in Senator Moses' office until two years ago, when she became associated with Miss Pearl McCall as a practicing attorney.

A member of the executive committee of the Women's Bar Association, she was appointed chairman of the legislative committee when Mrs. Edwina Austin Avery was president of the organization.

"Since we joined the Men's Bar Association in the fight more than a year ago, we have worked steadily toward our goal against many odds," Mrs. Gold said. In this connection she also pointed out that sponsors for the bill sought to embody in the measure causes for divorce most generally recognized by State legislatures, and that they asked only that addiitonal grounds for divorce be given as conducive not only to the general uniformity of practice, but also as inculcating sound moral procedure.

Opposed Two Amendments.

She also emphasized that "the bill does not attempt to set up a divorce mill in the District, nor does it seek to limit the actions of courts in nearby jurisdictions."

She mentioned she did not personally approve of the two Senate amendments. (She was referring to the grounds for absolute divorce on "separation for five consecutive years" and "incurable insanity for a period of 5 years."

Discussing the part women had played in helping to bring about the bill, Mrs. Gold pointed out that little could have been accomplished by women alone.

"You see, I'm not a feminist in the strictest sense," she said. "I believe in women working with men, rather than going out to accomplish things on their own hook. I doubt women could ever have put this bill through without the cooperation of such able men as Mr. Gertman, Representative Randolph Carpenter, of Kansas and Representative Ralph O. Brewster, of Maine."

Mrs. Jenckes to Speak On Federation Program

"The Influence of Women for Better Government" will be discussed by Representative Virginia Jenckes, of Indiana, during the weekly broadcast of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs at 12:30 o'clock today from station WRC.

Mrs. Jenckes will be introduced to the radio audience by Mrs. Everett Burroughs Hickerson, member of the federations' radio committee.

Length of Skirts Fluctuate Widely on Paris' Style 'Bourse'

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 2.—Nobody won the style battle over skirt lengths today because the designers jumped both ways at once.

Designers continued to put forth their best ideas for winter fashions, and the length of skirts fluctuated more than stock prices on the Bourse.

Chanel brought out the shortest skirts seen in Paris in several seasons, Louise Boulanger lowered her wide, scalloped hems to 7 inches from the floor, but the pay-off came when Rosevienne showed black crepe afternoon dresses with knife-pleated skirts 12 inches from the floor in front and only 9 in the back.

When it came to wool sports clothes, however, Rosevienne was distinctly on the Chanel side of the argument. Some of her skirts were 14 inches from the ground. Hems dropped to 12 inches for morning attire. But afternoon and cocktail garments came within 5 to 7 inches of the floor.

Designers appeared to have compromised their differences when street wear was involved. Hems were generally 10 to 12 inches from the pavement.

Waistlines also followed generally the normal line, occasionally were slightly lower; but many were decidedly slender and marked by striking belts of colorful leather, ornamented in front with metal plaques, or with belts of gilded or painted leather studded with hunks of lapis lazuli or gold.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Your article in Wednesday's column, answering the letter from the girl who signed herself "K. C." prompts me to tell the story of my friendship with a young man of Russian birth. Perhaps it may afford her some encouragement.

* * * *

I am a Washingtonian by birth, of American parentage, but my love for this young Russian is such that nothing on earth can alter my feeling for him. And I am happy to add that this feeling is a mutual one. This young man has a wonderful character and is as fine as they come in any nationality.

* * * *

My suggestion to "K. C.," in her hour of indecision is this: Don't let the opinions of your friends rob you of the happiness which can be yours with that "very fine young man" who is a Jew.

ANONYMOUS.

* * * *

DEAR ANONYMOUS: I feel sure "K. C." will appreciate the encouragement you give her to take a firm stand against unworthy prejudice, in the matter of loving a worthwhile man in the face of her friends' disapproval.

* * * *

One who orders his life to suit his friends, rather than himself, is confessing a certain weakness of character; while to be overly dependent upon society's approval is to be forever checked by a snobbish sense of social insecurity.

* * * *

Beauty of Spirit.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Your column certainly brings out the fact that among women is still existing that beauty of spirit which impels its possessors among the stronger human beings to share their creative strength with the weak; and which causes them to permit and even invite the weaker "vines" among us to draw upon that strength.

The particular example I am referring to is the letter from "Mrs. F. W. A.," which was printed in your column July 25. I am sure you must have received many, many requests for her consent to teach others the laws of mind control. I am one of those who accomplish whatever goals are set only at the price of mental and physical exhaustion, and with the most tremendous effort. MRS. J. F. O.

* * * *

DEAR MRS. J. F. O.: It's nice to know you found the letter from "Mrs. F. W. A." so inspirational in its implications. As a matter of fact, its publication resulted in the receipt of several requests for more information concerning "those laws of mind control" which she offered to teach "M. H. G." M. H.

Science Notes Physical Basis For Behavior

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

WE can not explain all the behavior difficulties of children on a psychological basis. Many of these upsets can be traced to definite organic causes. For example, we must not apply disciplinary measures to the correction of the persistent grimaces of a child who is suffering from chorea (St. Vitus' dance). Neither should we scold the youngster who, because of disease of the middle ear, holds his head a bit to one side.

Every child who presents a behavior problem should have a careful physical examination. In a surprising number of cases a physical basis for the difficulty will be discovered. We often charge to a bad disposition traits that are due to a poor food balance. Not long ago a school teacher told me about the "bad boy" in her class. He was alway misbehaving and perpetually in trouble. She tried every possible appeal without success, even summoning to her aid a 9-foot shelf of books on phychology. Finally in desperation she said, "John, what is it that makes you so unruly?" After a moment of hesitation he replied, "I guess it's because I'm so blamed hungry." And so it proved. After a few weeks of adequate meals he became a model student and a firm ally of his benefactor.

Remedial Value of Endocrines.

We are all familiar with the mental and physical retardation due to lack of thyroid secretion in childhood, and the remarkable effect in some instances of the administration of thyroid substance. Unfortunately the discovery of the importance of endocrine glands led to many false or exaggerated claims as to their curative powers. Not infrequently they were given for conditions that were not glandular in origin and hence were without effect, or even harmful.

Lurie cites the case of a 15-year-old boy who had become a ward of the Juvenile Court because he had repeatedly stolen money from his parents, relatives and friends. All sorts of disciplinary measures failed. Medical examination showed the boy was 2½ inches taller than the average and nearly 50 pounds heavier. His basic metabolic rate test was 15 per cent below normal. Here was a rapidly growing boy with a pituitary deficiency and an enormous craving for starches and sugars. In order to satisfy food demands money to buy extra food supplies had to be found. The lad was given extract of pituitary gland three times daily. Growth continued, but weight loss immediately followed. Secondary sex characteristics that had not previously appeared developed and there was a rapid return of the appetite to normal with cessation of stealing.

Family Relations Expert Analyzes Social Problems

DR. LEMO DENNIS ROCKWOOD.

Dr. Lemo Rockwood Says Grownups Develop Initiative and Sense of Responsibility After Leaving Parental Home.

By Sara Roberts Millhouse.

SHOULD YOUNG people seek separate roofs from their parents? Should working husbands and wives handle their finances on a 50-50 basis? Can a career woman find social adjustment without marriage?

These and other modern problems were discussed yesterday by Dr. Lemo Dennis Rockwood, field worker for the American Home Economics Association, who has just finished her third book on family relationships.

None of these questions can be settled arbitrarily," Dr. Rockwood said. "But there is a basic fundamental which applies to their solution. It is a knowledge of human relationships."

As to whether grown daughters and sons should leave home—that, Dr. Rockwood believes, depends upon the age of the children and the family and home conditions.

Develops Initiative.

"The time comes when every young person wants to break away, to try his wings," she said. "If he is grown, has finished college and prepared for work, he should go. It is good for young people to get out and away, to assume the responsibility for their actions. It makes them more decisive, develops initiative, makes them better marriage partners."

The boy or girl just emerging from adolescence should remain at home, however, if the home offers reasonable freedom and understanding, Dr. Rockwood believes.

"Family education which would induce each member to respect the other's individuality would solve that situation and keep young people at home until they are prepared for life," she said.

Dr. Rockwood sat behind a business-like desk in her office in the Mills building. A fresh, youthful looking woman of 39, she already has a record of achievement. She has been a teacher of home management and economics, a social worker, supervisor of a home for problem children, a research and field worker, a lecturer and writer.

Her extensive study of home relationships has convinced her of the need for a freer relationship between parents and children.

Many Remain Too Long.

"Grown children often remain at home when they should be out in the world," she said, because of the inability of their parents to release them. Perhaps the parents want to let go but don't know how. Emotional undertones often are brought to bear to keep the young person at home. And many families, whether consciously or unconsciously, make home so attractive that the grown children are reluctant to leave.

"Of course there are homes where finances, health and other things make it necessary or advantageous for the grown children to remain in them."

For these homes Dr. Rockwood recommends the right of all members to their pleasures, independence and the understanding of viewpoints. She told of a letter from a young man of 26 who attributed the freedom and happy relationships in his family to the formula: "Everybody minds his own business."

"Young people should break away even if they come back," she said. "I believe most of them would live more simply and feel more freedom alone. And they wouldn't do anything so terrible either. It's just that they want to feel their families don't know everything they are doing. This is merely reaction to the parents' too great curiosity and to their lack of respect for their children as individuals."

50-50 Financial Basis.

As to the financial problems of working husbands and wives—Dr. Rockwood believes a 50-50 basis is fair if working conditions and earning power are equal.

I certainly don't agree with the viewpoint of many women that the money they earn is for their personal use, while the husband's must go toward carrying the full financial burden of the home," she declared. "If a woman prefers to work outside the home as her share of the contract, then let her share her earnings. But it is an individual matter. I don't believe there's an absolutely right or wrong answer to everything."

As to sharing the housework, she said "A couple should work that out before marriage. The woman will probably contribute more to the home than the man. She sees more things to be done and will probably manage the home.

"Sharing of pleasures and the time given each other should be matters of personal taste. If both are tired, neither will expect too much. I think it is important for husband and wife to have their own interests, and to get away from home occasionally. It makes each more stimulating."

Marriage and Happiness.

And the unmarried woman?

"I've no patience with the assertion that the unmarried person is ill adjusted," she said. "Records of women's achievements prove otherwise. There are myriads of quite normal, healthy women, who are happy and absorbed in their work, and in doing good work, feel no need of anything further. Too much importance is often placed on sex and its relation to health. Psychological factors are not sufficiently considered. However, it's a personal matter.

"On the other hand, the experience of marriage is broadening, enrichening, and makes for a bigger life. But marriage is a way of living and has not the emphasis on sex that some believe."

Dr. Rockwood is the author of "Living Together in the Family" and "Pictures of Family Life" and her recently published volume "Teaching Family Relationships in the High School."

Americans Cease Odd Wear Abroad

American men tourists are no longer known in Europe by their loud clothes, reports Frank L. Dorpols, of Chicago, president of the National Association of Merchant Tailors.

"Several years ago," Mr. Dorpols said, "cartoonists and humorous writers were in the habit of picturing the American traveler abroad attired in conspicuous golf knickers and loud pattern socks, shirts and ties. But today this has changed. American men are now among the most conservatively dressed tourists, correctly attired for all occasions. They are distinguished by their well-tailored suits and overcoats and can be picked out of any crowd."

Crisp Cookies On Preferred Dessert List

Choose Recipes That Require No Intricate Mixing or Long Baking.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE COOKIE is riding to popularity on the crest of the wave. Crispy, crunchy cookies are on the preferred list for summer desserts that can be ready and waiting and served without notice. There is no better accompaniment for frosted chocolate, frozen desserts or fresh fruits than a supply of delicious homemade cookies.

Let's make our cookies the easiest way. Choose recipes that need no intricate mixing, no rolling and no long baking. Choose recipes, too, that you are sure will make cookies that have the best warm weather keeping qualities.

Refrigerator cookies, of course, will be the first choice of any woman who has ever tried them. They need but little mixing, they can be made up in fairly large batches and the batter can be stored in neat little rolls in the refrigerator and baked when needed. There are numerous other cookie doughs that can be stirred up quickly and dropped from the tip of a spoon to a greased cookie sheet. These will bake in from 10 to 12 minutes.

The essential ingredient in most cookie recipes is a good sweet shortening. Butter is the usual choice, but if it is too expensive, try equal portions of butter and a good grade of lard. The results will be excellent and the flavor will be unimpaired.

Not all of us prefer a crisp, crunchy cookie and those who do appreciate the timely appearance of one that is soft and chewy. These softer cookies should be wrapped in waxed paper to keep them moist, while the crispy ones should be kept in a box or jar with some circulation of air so that they won't become moist and limp.

Keep your cookie jar supplied with these.

Orange Pecan Ice Box Cookies.

1 cup butter or half butter and other shortening
½ cup brown sugar
½ cup white sugar
1 egg
½ cup pecans
2¾ cups flour
¼ teaspoon soda
2 tablespoons orange juice
1 tablespoon grated orange rind.

Cream the fat, add the sugar, the egg and the orange juice and rind. Beat smooth and stir in flour and soda sifted together. Add nuts, shape into rolls 1½ or 2 inches across and wrap in oiled paper. Chill overnight. Slice thin and bake 10-12 minutes in a 350 degree F. oven.

Peanut Butter Cookies.

½ cup peanut butter

The Collapse Of A System.

When Congress is spending billions of dollars that filter, directly or indirectly, into the pockets of individual beneficiaries, it is impossible to get excited over the restoration of $45,000,000 previously cut from the annual pensions bill. So long as the spending spree continues, items of this sort appear incidental. The more significant aspect of the bill granting larger allowances to Spanish-American War veterans is that it will—if signed by the President—complete the destruction of the pensions system so carefully established two years ago.

Reform of the haphazard and unsystematic methods of caring for war veterans before March, 1933, was generally recognized as one of the foremost achievements of the Roosevelt Administration. In place of loose, discriminatory statutes granting pensions of varying liberality, Congress enacted a bill designed to place veterans of all wars on an equal footing, with substantial savings to the Government. The veterans' lobbies got busy, however, and within a few months that uniform system had been impaired by a measure granting increased benefits to a special group. Last year the system was further mutilated, and now both houses have voted to finish the abolition of the economy act. With it, of course, go all the efforts of the Administration to rationalize the pension system.

When pensions have once been granted, powerful arguments can be found for their continuation. Indeed, it seems unfair for the Government suddenly to reduce or eliminate benefits upon which thousands of persons have become dependent. Doubtless it was this contention that induced Congress to increase allowances to the soldiers of '98, even though some of the pensioners may have attained a place on the rolls through fraud or may already be drawing salaries from the Government. Congress seems to have recognized a sort of vested right of pensioners to continue living at Government expense, despite the fact that some of the benefits were granted as late as 1930.

In doing so, however, the legislature has virtually closed the door to the establishment of a rational pensions system based on equal treatment for all groups of veterans, with due regard for the Government's other numerous financial obligations.

Despicable.

Apparently no official action is to be taken against the employe of a New Jersey utilities company who recommended that a "whispering campaign" be started to create suspicion that the President and his chief advisers are mentally incompetent. Probably that is the best way of dealing with individuals whose moral sense is so deficient that they fail to realize the heinousness of indulging in calumnies of this sort. Fortunately the common sense, and in most cases the inherent decency, of the average American alone afford protection against such dastardly activities.

The Plainfield advertising man who made his confession to the Senate lobbying committee now admits shame over his "unsound" suggestion. Perhaps, before the episode is forgotten, his education will have progressed a step further. For without question his conduct should stamp him as an outcast from all decent society.

The First Step.

Passage by the House of a bill to regulate buses and trucks marks the first step toward attainment of a co-ordinated system of regulation of the country's transportation facilities.

Under the bill, which differs but slightly from that passed by the Senate, common and contract carriers—both bus and truck—are placed under control of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Private trucks, however, are to be exempted from regulation except as regards safety provisions and limitations upon hours of work for employes. With the enactment of this measure, the handicaps under which regulated railways have operated in competition with virtually unregulated buses will be largely eliminated, and responsible bus lines, too, will benefit by the change.

Co-ordinator Eastman, who has urged action upon this proposal for a long time, is of the opinion that it will "have a very beneficial effect on the whole transportation situation, although too much ought not to be expected of it." A great deal remains to be done, of course, to restore the railroads to a satisfactory position. Regulation of trucks and buses will not and should not enable the roads to carry freight that can be more economically transported by other agencies on a basis of fair competition. The railways have to be prepared, too, to face increasing competition from water carriers and air transport services. Further scaling of debt charges and reduction in operating expenses are also essential.

The need for a comprehensive regulatory program of this sort is emphasized by the financial condition of the Class I roads, which, it is estimated, fell $60,000,000 short of covering their fixed charges during the first half of the present year. This showing indicates the need for a speedy consummation of the transportation program of the Administration combined with active efforts by the carriers to improve and cheapen the quality of their services and reduce overhead charges.

Support For The League.

"I wish I could report to the House that some great progress had been made with our peacemaking efforts at Geneva. I am afraid that all I can say is that the negotiations are continuing. * * * I should not be honest with the House if I did not say that, in our view, the state of Europe remains one of gloom and apprehension."

These extracts from the speech made to Parliament on Thursday by Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign minister, reflect the cancerous anxiety aroused in England by the war of conquest which Italy has been preparing to wage on Ethiopia. It is not the custom of responsible British ministers to be sensational in their public utterances. So the world may be sure that Sir Samuel was not overstating the significance of information at his disposal when he told Parliament that this threatened war "would inevitably lead to confusion in Europe" and to "a formidable unsettlement of the great colored races of the world."

Without considering other factors, such as the vital British interest in protecting the sources of the Blue Nile, in Ethiopian territory, the two reasons publicly cited by the British foreign minister are ample to explain why his government has been doing its utmost to secure a formula for peaceful settlement. Hostilities in Ethiopia might well ignite a chain of powder jeopardizing the very existence of the British Empire. Another war in Europe, coupled with "formidable unsettlement" of the colored peoples of Africa and India, would place upon British statesmanship the greatest strain to which it has ever been subjected.

So Sir Samuel feels it a public duty to make clear how little localized, and how far-reaching in its implications, is this problem which at first glance appears to concern only Italy and a primitive and predominantly Negro empire in faraway East Africa. And the anxiety for the future of western civilization obvious in the British statesman's attitude does much to explain why President Roosevelt has found it desirable to issue a statement placing official American support behind the effort of the League of Nations to preserve peace.

With Negro demonstrations against Italy already beginning to take place in this country, with numerous organizations denouncing the persecutions in Germany, and urging official protest by our Government, the myth of American unconcern for happenings overseas is impossible to maintain. The question is not whether the American people are insulated from world problems, but how our Government can most constructively express the interest in the world community which our citizens inevitably and properly feel.

So far as the dispute between Italy and Ethiopia is concerned, the President has chosen a wise course. He has again, but now more pointedly, intimated to the Italian government that this country views with the strongest disapproval any headstrong measures inimical to the precarious international political equilibrium. And he has made his attitude more effective by formally expressing American support for the conciliatory efforts of the League of Nations as the only agency even theoretically capable of finding egress from the very dangerous situation which Mussolini's predatory attitude is creating.

In consequence any Italian rebuff to the efforts of the council now implies a rebuff to the Government of the United States. That fact may well have been instrumental in creating the much more optimistic situation reported today from Geneva.

A Sacrilege Prevented.

The recent success of the leaders of the National Woman's Party in preventing their headquarters from being torn down by the Government should be regarded by every Washingtonian as a personal victory. This old brick house on Capitol Hill is one of the few pre-Revolutionary buildings in the District. Built in 1772 by Lord Baltimore, as a wedding gift for his daughter, it in time came into the possession of the late Senator Porter Dale of Vermont. In disposing of it as a center for a political group, Senator Dale said that he was very happy to sell it to an organization with a program, as its chances for permanency seemed much greater than if bought by an individual.

The Government's plans were to take over the city block housing the old mansion along with other less famous edifices and to build thereon a general accounting office. This destruction program, involving some $11,150,000, seems utterly incongruous in the face of the sums being spent elsewhere for painstaking restoration of historic sites. Even whole towns are falling heir to grants and subsidies so that the lore of the past may have some tangible memorial for the generations to come.

Washington, or any city, does well to guard zealously its landmarks. It has been only a matter of a few years that the Old Brick Capitol was razed to make way for the New Supreme Court Building. And while it can not be expected that progress should stand aside for sentiment, it would be at least equally undesirable if no effort were made to retain the flavor and substance of a bygone age.

District residents should take every precaution in the future to see that this, as well as other buildings of its ilk, are not subject to further attack. For it is hardly fair that the whole burden of preserving a reminder of crinolines and fair but unenfranchised ladies should fall on the comely shoulders of ardent feminists striving to shake off the last vestige of those times.

Good For The House!

The decisive vote by which the House again rejected the "death sentence" clause of the Administration's holding company bill is a highly encouraging reassertion of legislative independence. Of almost equal importance was the vote upholding the action of the House conferees in refusing to permit an Administration lawyer to play a leading role in conferences on the bill.

In this latest clash between the House majority and Administration supporters, the merits of the controversial section of the holding company bill were no longer the major issue. The House had previously emphatically rejected the more drastic, destructive features of the Senate bill after a debate of unusual thoughtfulness and high quality. Since then no relevant new arguments, no hidden facts have been brought to light to warrant a reversal of its position.

Although the Senate committee engaged in investigating lobbying activities has unearthed some most disgusting evidence of abuse by propaganda agencies, such revelations have no real bearing upon the controversy over the holding company bill. Many House members rightly resent the effort that has been made to capture votes for the "death sentence" by arousing prejudice against all holding companies because of the flagrant misdeeds of one concern.

They are particularly aroused by open or veiled insinuations that those voting against the "death sentence" are tools of the power interests. Representative Cooper openly charges the Black committee with attempts to "cast suspicion and employ the art of intimidation upon every member of this House." Representative Huddleston also referred in debate to the "base and damnable insinuations that we who support the House bill are playing the game of the utilities."

Of course fair and just decisions based upon judicial consideration of the merits of proposed legislation are impossible if lawmakers lack the courage to stand firm in face of such attacks. Furthermore, differences between House and Senate cannot be settled in an atmosphere insuring the "careful, calm and deliberate consideration" upon which the Huddleston resolution lays stress, if special pleaders for the Administration are permitted to direct the conference discussions.

The House has served notice that it can not be scared or persuaded into changing its mind by attempts to impugn its motives or play upon its prejudices. Consequently, the defeat of the Administration is a victory for good government, which is jeopardized whenever legislators succumb to improper pressure from without—whether that pressure comes from the executive branch of Government or from private propaganda agencies. Certainly there is much that can and should be done to improve the co-operation of executive and legislature. But the solution of this problem does not lie in the open or veiled dictation to the elected representatives of the people.

Poetic License.

However inconsistent they may be in all other respects, poets have one characteristic in common — optimism. Hope springs eternal in the breasts of bards, even though there are those who contend that the Muse is getting fed up with ambrosia and would like to vary it with something more substantial. And among that number must be counted the Poet Laureate League, Inc., of this city, who apparently believes that it is about time the public stopped confusing the word "idyll" with "idle." We say "who" rather than "which" since the league is a one-man affair.

He, or it, has drawn up a draft for the relief of unemployed rhymesters which in general proposes that the Government invest a beggarly half million in sonnets, ballads, rondeaus, and the like. Its, or his, aims are set forth in succinct and businesslike language, and in the suggested disposal of this amount of money is a challenge to those who have never put much store in artistic bookkeeping. For the project stipulates that all moneys from the sale of this relief poetry, up to and including $1,000, shall be retained by the writer. Royalties "thereafter" are to be divided with the Government.

If that is not the dauntless height of sanguine expectation, then the case of the famous Poetry Book Shop in London is. That literary rendezvous in Bloomsbury, where nothing but verse was sold, has at last been forced out of business. More surprising than this sad commentary on the depression is the fact that for nearly 22 years it had been run as a venture to test the commercial value of unalloyed poetry. Not even the prohibitionists carried a noble experiment to that length before surrendering to the slings and arrows of outrageous circumstance.

In protesting Il Duce's statement that Ethiopia needs to be civilized, Emperor Haile Selassie says that the Ethiopians are God's children. Then tell us, O Lion of Judah, why haven't they got shoes?

Pressing international question: Will Italy resign from the League of Nations, or will the League of Nations become resigned to Italy?

For Analostan Concerts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent slightly ironical story in The Post about the construction work on Analostan Island (or Teddy Roosevelt Island, if you must) cheered me considerably despite the sad plight of Ceph O'Connor and D. C. Fahey's gloomy bicentennial prediction of the finish. This because it will be one spot around Washington where the useful but noisy auto will be completely banned. However, it must be acknowledged that the CCC boys are doing a great piece of work and that even now you can get an idea of what the island's beauty will be like.

All this, as a prelude to two suggestions: (a) if it's going to take 100 years to finish the Analostan job why not make a District work project out of it and get it done quicker; (b) but even before that time let us by all means have summer band and orchestra concerts in that machine-age sanctuary from automobiles.

I have only one objection to the orchestra concerts to be held this summer in the charming marine atmosphere near the Lincoln Memorial steps. And that is the obvious one that only those early birds who get the front seats near the river-docked orchestra pavilion will be able to hear even the voice of the big bass drum. And after all we can't stop the autos from speeding and screeching around Mr. Lincoln's monument. On the other hand, if the concerts were held at Analostan Hall on Teddy Roosevelt Island, the autos and all their work could not get within honking distance of the first fiddle.

Sometimes, in my more optimistic moments, I like to believe we are making progress in our fumbling attempts to get out of the hog-pen era. That's why things like the Analostan project cheer me up as another bit of evidence that such work may be the source of the major productive values of the future. C. J. S. DURHAM.

Washington, July 3.

Concerning Clause 213.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Clause 213 is a law that states that when a reduction of personnel in Government bureaus is necessary, preference is given to families having one income over families having two or more incomes. With thousands of families having no income and a third of the population on relief, there can be no question as to the fairness and economic value of this law.

In complying with Clause 213, the merit system can not be seriously impaired, for Government employes as a rule are doing efficient work. Otherwise they would have been dismissed. Then, too, the weakness of the present efficiency rating system is well known. It is not unusual for an employe making a high rating under one employer to make a much lower grade under another, or vice versa.

The claim that Clause 213 discriminates against women by dismissing wives whose husbands are also doing Government work, can not be justified, for either the husband or wife has the privilege of remaining in the Government service when, in accordance with the law, it is necessary to dismiss one of them. Nor do they hold a monopoly on efficiency, for their places could be ably filled by competent unemployed. If experience is necessary, promotion is the solution.

The salary of every Government employe is paid from a tax that is levied upon the people of each State and the people of each State have the right—a right that is acknowledged in the State quota law—to be equally represented in the distribution of Government positions which are, as a class, superior to others, and as there are not enough of these jobs to go around, to the qualified of each State, one to a family should be the limit. Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have noted with much interest the series of articles by Mr. Morgan Baker appearing in The Washington Post relative to a study of the British and French systems of handling government personnel.

Inasmuch as I have been for many years chief of the bureau personnel section of the Internal Revenue Service, these articles particularly appeal to me. They are exceedingly enlightening, and I want to congratulate your paper for its enterprise in pursuing such matters of public interest. It is my understanding that these articles were a result of a trip to Europe by Mr. Baker. Such work as this, I am sure, will be much appreciated by Government employes by reason of its relation to the merit system and the possibilities of improvement which may result from such studies.

I trust that your organization will permit Mr. Baker to follow up this matter with further articles of a similar nature.

Broadcast Concerts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: According to recent press reports, one of the major broadcasting chains has inaugurated the policy of improving its children's programs, but it does not seem to occur to radio executives that there is room for doing likewise with many other types of programs. Apparently most of the commercial sponsors have an idea that the average radio listener is still in the eighth grade.

Symphonic concerts and open-air operas are now being given nightly or semiweekly. It is a pity that such intellectual recreation can not be heard by the thousands who are unable to attend in person, instead of the banal sentimentalities that clog the air waves.

Last Sunday evening one of the local stations broadcast a fragment of the National Symphony Orchestra's concert. This is most commendable and were it possible to reallocate part of the commercial time, I am sure the majority of radio listeners who like good music would be deeply grateful.

Hot Weather Laughs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The state of the weather being what it is, I want to thank your paper and your cartoonist, Mr. Elderman, for that wonderful cartoon about the old-time religion. Ye gods, if you did not provide us with a laugh in this temperature, I do not know what we would do.

And what a laugh in all this bunk about standing by the Constitution. Make up your mind, Mr. Editor, that the public sees through all that.

What a laugh to suppose that because of a Constitution adopted 150 years ago a slum clearance program in Louisville, Ky., just can not be done. What a laugh even in this weather to think that because of a Constitution 150 years old we can't do something with this economic situation.

Favors Try-outs For New Buses.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post's "Oddly Enough" feature recently brought out the fact that Capital Transit car tracks, after being built into the new Calvert Street Bridge, are being torn up without ever being used. This move foreshadows the substitution of buses for electric cars on the Chevy Chase-Connecticut avenue line, which is to take place September 1.

Those living along this line will do well to consider the result of this change before permitting it. If the substitution is allowed, the 60 buses, which will be required to replace the present 40 cars, will very appreciably increase the traffic congestion now experienced on this busy thoroughfare. Sixty buses cutting through traffic lanes in and out from the curb certainly are not going to help a situation that is already bad, and 60 buses pouring out obnoxious fumes into the automobiles of those driving this route certainly is not going to add to the pleasure of driving nor to the health of those of us who have to take it. The old electric cars have their faults, but gassing and skidding are not among them. It can safely be assumed in 999 cases in 1,000 that the cars will remain on their tracks and they can not skid sideways if the streets are slippery.

During a recent hearing on this before the Public Utilities Commission, the Forest Hills folk wisely requested a trial of the proposed bus service before permitting removal of the car tracks, but, at that time, the issue was evaded. Peoples Counsel Roberts certainly is neglecting his duty to the citizens if he permits this change to go through without a trial period to let the buses prove themselves, if they can.

Recently, while trying out the new Anacostia bus service, which was forced upon the citizens of that section, I heard many complaints of the new buses, which included gassing of passengers, jiggling or vibration of vehicles, which is annoying to readers, and during the recent hot weather there was much adverse criticism of the extremely limited window openings which greatly restricts the free flow of air through the buses and makes them downright uncomfortable.

Fortunately, for those who wish to put the buses over, the citizens' associations are almost totally inactive during the summer months. In voteless District of Columbia the citizens' association is the "big stick" the residents possess to protect their interests and to prevent things being put across which are questionable.

The Post Impressionist

Call For Mr. Politis!

Post Office, Saturday.

"REPORTEDLY, the negotiations include appointment of a fifth conciliator."

So sigh the dolorous dispatches from Geneva, chronicling the League of Nations' endeavor to bring Ethiopia and Italy to terms. "Reportedly:" A blessedly face-saving word, even if mongrel!

And yet, in this case, why not "of course" instead of "reportedly?" For "most prominently mentioned as the fifth conciliator" is Nicolas Politis of Athens (Greece) and Paris (France).

It would be odd indeed, if M. Politis wasn't mentioned. Sooner or later, the League always sends for him, when it has to find a formula, when it has tried to find a formula without him, and when it has thus arrived at desperation.

Whereupon, heretofore, M. Politis has always found the formula. He is the Nimrod of the formula huntingfield.

Finding a formula is the League's phrase for avoiding fisticuffs—anyhow, for postponing them—and the League is well aware that the longer you can restrain a blow the less likely it is to be struck. In this sense, a formula is a combination of sounds which say six kind words on one side of a controversy and half-a-dozen on the other—words that, while they may not really satisfy either side, leave neither a proper excuse for bolting the convention.

Well, words like that M. Politis can utter in more tones, and with more variations on a single theme, than any other human being now alive.

Advisedly sure of himself, with sufficient faith in the men he advises. This sort of person:

The Post-Impressionist, when a correspondent at Geneva, had once to collect lofty sentiments from lofty statesmen on an anniversary of the Versailles Conference. To produce these, most of the personages made their secretaries labor overnight. M. Politis, motoring to his hotel from the League Secretariat, dictated 100 words in pure American.

"I'll submit the copy for correction," said the correspondent.

"Don't bother to," said the diplomat.

Twelve months or so later, we had to secure similar sentiments on the League's birthday from the same lot of people, this time at Madrid, where the Council had been meeting. Half the statesmen promised that they'd send the material on their return home. M. Politis, from a train-window, remarked, in his immaculate French:

"Take what I said last year about the benefits of the end of the war, change it to suit the benefits of an international organization to preserve peace. And don't bother to show me—the 'copy.'"

Picture yourself a short, slim man, broad shouldered, keen-eyed, with iron gray hair and mustaches, ever precisely clothed in unassumingly excellent fashion — bow-tie never askew, white collar that never wilted. Imagine a Greek who, though he speaks American when he wants to, addresses to the League a more elegant French than any Frenchman there possesses—gently and without haste, to the point and without hesitation.

A lawyer? The best. Though grudgingly admitting the lucidity of his logic, the clarity of its expression, his critics complain that he has an entirely diplomatic mind, is too expert at hairsplitting. But, if diplomacy means anything better than trickery—if it means conciliation — then an entirely diplomatic mind is not entirely out of place in diplomacy. It is better that hairs should be split than that heads should fall.

Italy used to have at the League almost as keen a lawyer as M. Politis: Vittorio Scialoja. Signor Scialoja was a wit; he would rather say a clever thing against Fascism than a dull thing for it. Besides, he undertook a divorce suit for the American wife of a jet Black Shirt. So Scialoja faded out.

M. Politis is too clever to let his undeniable wit contract the sphere of his profound usefulness.

Nicolas Socrates Politis—he deserves his middle name!

Born in 1872. Rigorously reared in the Orthodox Church and still a zealous member thereof. Professor of international law at French universities—Aix, Poitiers, Paris—from 1910 to 1914. Then director general of the Greek Foreign Affairs Ministry and Foreign Affairs Minister until 1922. Veteran of peace conferences, both Balkan and World War. Ever since which, virtually permanent Minister of Greece to France, and the busiest man in Geneva when the League has anything difficult to consider—anything, large or little, so it's tough enough: armaments or andirons, minorities, mandates, tariffs or lettres de change.

It has been whispered that he advised Ethiopia's early course in the present controversy. If so, the Italians will oppose Politis' appointment as a fifth member of any arbitration board, otherwise composed of two Ethiopian appointees and two Italians.

When it comes to Nicolas Politis, the Duce certainly must miss Vittorio Scialoja.

Fair Enough

By

Westbrook Pegler

Influence by Wire.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Aug. 2.—You wouldn't imagine that anyone on the holding companies' side of the row would have the gall to mention the matter, but a little pamphlet issued by the American Federation of Utility Investors, Chicago, contains the following:

"For the first time in the history of our country, Congress has been influenced by the letters and telegrams of millions of investors."

This reference obviously embraces among the "millions of investors" those thousands of phantom-investors whose names were gathered by telegraph messenger boys for a royalty of 3 cents each after the messengers had explained the deep political and economic meanings of the case.

Where those whom Mr. Harding used to call the "best minds" disagree so violently on a tangled issue, it is only by instinct that the layman chooses his side of the barricade.

In the case, remembering how thoroughly the "great body of thrifty, self-supporting citizens who constitute the investor-class" were frisked by the promoters of holding companies when the frisking was good, it is natural that the ordinary, dumb citizens should look upon the holding companies' solicitude with a fishy eye and ask "why are you boys trying to be so good to me now?"

It is a queer situation, in which the stick-up man, having gone over his victim once, stands his ground and undertakes to protect him from the cop.

• • • •

humble ranks of his bank were being docked every pay day for payments on stock in the same bank which they had bought at the peak. Long after he took his loot and touched shoe-leather, completing the bargain, these members of the "great body of thrifty, self-supporting citizens who constitute the investor class" were continuing to make forced payments on a dead horse.

And, finally, adding insult to robbery, they were all assessed for "voluntary" contributions to buy a $3,000 retirment present for the man who had double-crossed them.

• • • •

THE "great body of thrifty, self-supporting citizens who constitute the investor class" has been reduced to a handful, thanks in large part to the great altruists who now defend them against the brutal policy of the Government. The small body of survivors have put their money away under a loose brick or in the savings banks or insurance, which amounts to the same thing. A man with money to invest, accumulated by thrift, has no idea where to put his money into action with a reasonable degree of safety. If he invests it in industry there is a danger that the Government will do something to the business which will destroy his investment. On the other hand, he well remembers the great New York banker who was called before Ferd Pecora in Washington and forced to admit that he was getting out from under while the clerks and other employes in the

• • • •

RECALLING the sad experiences of the "investor class" when they were protected only by the conscience of the master-patriots who now view with alarm the blow to private industry, it is easy to understand why the survivors hesitate to trust private industry again. Mr. Roosevelt's police methods may be such that in shooting the bandit he will also hit the victim, but the bandit, himself, is in no position to complain about that.

• • • •

The trial of Mr. Sobbing Sam Insull, in Chicago, showed that the holding-company issue is so complex that the "investor class" cannot hope to understand what it is all about and will have to trust to luck, realizing, however, that Mr. Roosevelt is more likely to have honest, altruistic motives than the holding companies. In Mr. Insull's trial there were charts endeavoring to show the pyramided relationship of his in-bred holding companies which looked like the family tree of the all-American mutt. Even Mr. Insull, himself, the weeping wizard of the Middle-West, was not entirely clear on all the details, and it may be judged from that whether the jury which decided that he was a sick, sad old man and let him go was guided by intelligent understanding of the evidence or by emotion and a wish to be magnanimous to a fallen big-shot.

If the "great body of thrifty, self-supporting citizens" is asked to make a choice of defenders between President Roosevelt, on one extreme, and big-hearted Howard Hopson, the vanishing altruist of the Associated Gas & Electric, on the other, and if all that each side charges against the other is correct, what difference does it make who wins? But when did big-hearted Howard develop this great sentimental crush on the poor widows and orphans of the investor class, and is it really love?

Hannibal, Mo.

By

William Lyon Phelps

WHEN the great Carthaginian general Hannibal committed suicide in the year 183 B. C., his last moments would have been comforted if he could have looked forward some 2,000 years or so, and known that all eyes in the United States of America in the year A. D. 1935 would turn to Hannibal, Mo.

Hannibal is a town of about 22,000 inhabitants; is situated on the Mississippi River 120 miles above St. Louis, can be reached by any one of three railways, or by river steamers and barges. Back of the business section of the town, hills and bluffs rise to a height of 200 feet, affording admirable places for residences and magnificent views of the river and surrounding country.

• • • •

In this town Mark Twain found the scenery for his three greatest works, Tom Sawyer, Huckleberry Finn, and Life on the Mississippi. The house where he lived was built by his father in 1844, and is now a permanent memorial to his genius.

The first settler arrived at this locality in 1818, the town "was laid out" in 1819, and got its city charter in 1839.

There is now a first-class modern hotel, called the Mark Twain Hotel, and I have just received a letter from Hannibal, on the stationery of this hotel, written by my scholarly friend, Mrs. Mae Trovillion Smith. On the stationery are pictures of the four things that every visitor to Hannibal will look at with interest—the house of Mark Twain, the statue of the two boys, Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn, the statue of Mark Twain, and the entrance to the famous cave.

The New Tax Program

Additional Burdens Seen In Levy On Corporate Excess Profits.

The Post presents herewith the sixth of a series of seven analytical articles on the tax proposals now under congressional consideration. The author is professor of finance at New York University and an outstanding authority in this field.

By Dr. Jules I. Bogen.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE House Ways and Means Committee has amended President Roosevelt's tax program in a fundamental manner by including a heavy corporate excess profits levy. This promises to be the most fruitful of all the suggested new imposts, as it is expected to bring into the Federal Treasury about $100,000,000 annually, or almost 40 per cent of the estimated yield from all of the proposed new taxes.

The President's special tax message to Congress of June 19 did not contain any hint of an excess profits levy. Rather, it specifically asked for a "corporation income tax graduated according to the size of corporation income" to achieve the avowed objective of adjusting "our tax system in accordance with economic capacity, advantage and fact."

It is readily evident that the progressive corporate income tax suggestion was advanced without preliminary analysis. A little reflection has now made it plain that an excess profits levy would be much the more logical way to tax profitable, large business units more heavily. To save face, however, the House bill proposes to make the corporate income levy 13¼ per cent on net incomes up to $15,000, and 14¼ per cent on incomes above that level, in place of the existing flat 13¾ per cent rate. This change, expected to yield $15,000,000 of additional revenue, would introduce a further and altogether needless minor complication in our income tax schedule.

• • • •

THE excess profits tax is not a new experiment. It was tried in this country during and immediately after the war, and it did yield substantial revenues at that time. However, corporate incomes during a war period, or for that matter during an era of inflationary prosperity, are swollen to such an extent that the payment of excess profits taxes leaves a quite liberal balance of earnings for shareholders. At times like the present, on the other hand, when the country is just emerging from an extremely severe depression, additional taxes of this kind constitute a far more severe burden.

The proposed new excess profits taxation would not be imposed immediately, it is true. The House bill provides that it shall apply only to taxable years ending after June 30, 1936. However, few expect that inflationary boom conditions will be present by that time.

There are particularly cogent reasons for not choosing the incipient stages of business recovery as the time to impose a severe series of excess profits taxes upon corporations.

• • • •

These are:

1. Many enterprises have suffered severe depletion or elimination of needed working capital reserves during the depression years. In order to regain a strong financial position, so as to be prepared for future contingencies, they may have to retain within the business the large earnings of several prosperous years. High excess profits taxes, by diverting to the Government a substantial fraction of such larger earnings, may seriously hamper such a program of replenishment of liquid corporate reserves.

2. Rehabilitation, modernization and expansion work have been skimped by numerous enterprises during the lean years beginning with 1931, it is well known. A more liberal policy of plant modernization and improvement would not only be a good thing for the individual concerns involved, but also for general business. It would generate much-needed orders for the durable goods manufacturing industries, which have lagged far behind in the recovery procession thus far. Excess profits taxes will eat into the funds available for such work in many enterprises, especially while it remains difficult to raise money for such purposes through new security flotations in the capital market and reinvested earnings remain the chief source of funds for new corporate investment.

3. Stockholders, preferred as well as common, as a class have had to make severe sacrifices during the depression. Perhaps no major share of our national income has been (ed nearly as much during the l .. few years as the aggregate of dividend payments to shareholders.

• • • •

A NUMBER of corporations have displayed an exemplary feeling of social responsibility by maintaining employment and wage levels through years of low activity, even where this policy has eaten deeply into cash reserves and made necessary a slashing or elimination of dividends long before cash reserves were impaired. Under such circumstances, shareholders naturally expect that, with recovery in earning power, they will make up some of the dividends which they have missed during the depression. High excess profits taxes imposed at the very beginning of the subsequent recovery period materially reduce the likelihood that such hopes will be fulfilled.

None of these arguments, it will be noted, applies to the principle of corporate excess profits taxation. They do militate against imposing such taxes at the high rates proposed in the House bill and on the eve of what appears to be a recovery from a profound and protracted depression, particularly since the levy is to be imposed on a year-to-year basis.

The imposition of very high income taxes on corporations on the basis of one year's performance is less defensible than the application of the same principle in personal income taxation. Most corporations find that they must of necessity retain a goodly share of the reported earnings of prosperous years as reserves against future losses and contingencies of various kinds. Too large a portion of corporate earnings, in fact, are of the mere bookkeeping variety to justify high rates of excess profits taxation on the income of single annual periods.

AN excess profits tax is one of the most difficult to administer. The higher the percentage that the earnings of a corporation bear to its investment, the larger the tax it must pay. Hence, the management would like to make the valuation of an enterprise, on which the tax is based, as high as possible. The Treasury, on the other hand, to obtain more revenue, would like to have the base placed as low as feasible.

The war-time excess profits levy led to extended controversy over the determination of the "invested capital" of a corporation. The new proposal, as advanced by the House Ways and Means Committee, imposes an excess profits tax of 5 to 20 per cent on net income in excess of 8 per cent on the "adjusted declared value" of a corporation's capital stock.

The true extent of the burden imposed by the tax will thus depend primarily upon how large the "adjusted declared value" will be in any given case. This value is to be determined under an existing legal provision.

The revenue act of 1934 provides that corporations should themselves declare the value of their capital stock. On this declared value, they are now required to pay a capital stock tax of $1 per $1,000 annually. In addition, to discourage the declaration of too low a value, an excess profits tax of 5 per cent is imposed upon that portion of a corporation's net income which exceeds 12½ per cent of its declared value.

THE low level of earnings of the past few years has tempted many corporations to declare quite low values for their capital stock. In this way, they reduce their liability on account of the capital stock tax of $1 per $1,000, while they have felt that they would not have to pay anything on account of the excess profits levy for a long time to come, owing to adverse business conditions prevailing. At best, of course, such valuations were matters of opinion.

The present law does not permit a change in this basic valuation, once it has been declared, except for certain specified yearly adjustments on account of additional capital investment, distributions to shareholders, etc. With the imposition of new severe excess profits taxes, therefore, many corporations will find that they are subject to particularly heavy payments because of relatively low valuations they have declared in the past. No way is provided for them to readjust this valuation upward, even where the facts would thoroughly justify it.

Provision should certainly be made in the new law for reasonable readjustment of declared capital values where circumstances require. To do otherwise would open Congress to the charge of trickery, on the ground that a law was passed last year which tended to induce many corporations to declare relatively low capital values, and they are now to be penalized for doing so through high excess profits taxes.

IN ANY event, there is room for considerable doubt that the excess profits levy will yield the expected $100,000,000 per year.

On that portion of the net income of a corporation which will exceed 25 per cent of its adjusted declared value, the total Federal income tax would be 34¼ per cent if the House committee rates should be enacted into law. Many States impose separate corporate income levies of their own in addition. Thus, a powerful incentive is provided a prosperous corporation to expand its outlays for advertising and other types of promotion, and so reduce the amount of its income which is subject to the higher brackets of income taxation.

As was the case when the war-time excess profits levy was in effect, enterprises with large earning power may find such promotional expenses, which tend to build up future earning power, considerably more desirable than the paying out of 40 per cent or so on the higher earning brackets in taxes, leaving only 60 per cent for disbursement to stockholders or additions to surplus.

• • • •

THE PROPOSED corporate excess profits tax, we find in summary.

1. Is designed to replace the graduated corporate income levy as a means for placing additional burdens upon profitable, large business enterprises.

2. Will tend to curtail the ability of corporate enterprises to replenish cash reserves, seriously depleted during the depression.

3. Will interfere with rehabilitation and modernization work by corporations which have skimped on such outlays during the depression period.

4. Will make it less likely than ever that stockholders of many corporations will make up during the next period of prosperity the dividends which they missed in recent lean years.

5. Is an extremely difficult tax to administer, especially since it is imposed on the basis of an "adjusted declared value" obtained from corporations in connection with an entirely different tax, so that many inequities will result in practice.

6. Will encourage avoidance of the levy through the investment of surplus earnings of more prosperous years in the form of expenses for advertising and other promotional developments, thus reducing the yield.

Corporate Net Income Taxation

Japanese Fleet Opens Maneuvers

Tri-Power Parley in 1936 Hinted by Diplomat.

Tokyo, Aug. 2 (AP).—Japan's symbol of sea power, the combined first and second fleets of 60 vessels headed for the Northwest Pacific and annual maneuvers tonight, while a noted Japanese diplomat hinted at a possible tri-power naval parley in 1936.

Before leaving the Japanese coast today the combined fleets passed in informal review before Emperor Hirohito.

Ambassador Tsuneo Matsudaira, who landed at Yokohama, said Great Britain's attitude had "improved" after gradual recognition of Japan's position in the Manchukuan incident. Saying he believed Britain desired a tripartite naval conference in 1935, the Ambassador said such a conference would be futile unless there was a chance of a Japanese-British trade accord.

Navy Acts to End Strike at Shipyard

By the United Press.

President Roosevelt at his press conference yesterday revealed that the navy has threatened conditionally to take away naval construction contracts of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation, at Camden, N. J., unless the strike at its plant is settled.

The strike has been in progress about 12 weeks. The Government has offered to arbitrate by appointing three officials who are acceptable to the workers, but the arbiters are not acceptable to the corporation, he said.

The Navy yesterday dispatched another letter supplementing one of last week, the Chief Executive revealed.

Bill Approved to Honor Early Settlers in D. C.

A favorable report was submitted to the House yesterday by the District Committee on a bill to permit erection of a memorial to early District settlers.

The monument will be donated by the National Society of the Daughters of the American Colonists.

Under the bill the memorial must be approved by the Fine Arts Commission and can not be located on the Capitol or White House grounds.

About Paris

By

Andre Vulliet

Les Clochards.

ALL those familiar with the Paris scenery, be it through their own experience or through that of painters or writers, have seen, in reality or in their imagination, some true-to-type specimen of that typical Parisian species, the "clochards," reputed the world over for living under the arches of the 30 Paris bridges.

American tourists might be tempted to call them "hoboes," while Englishmen would probably put them down as "tramps." But they do not exactly fit in either of those descriptions. Considering the way they seem to look at life, we would rather regard them as itinerant and penniless philosophers. Like cats, refined people and certain silent creatures, they preferably come out of their seclusion in the dark of night. But you would be mistaken if you took them for dangerous apaches or underworld thugs. Most of them are harmless.

From 10 o'clock on, through the night, you can see hundreds of them around the Central Markets, gathered there Lord only knows how. They are looking for food and for a few pennies. While miles of street in that section called "the Paris Belly" are converted into pyramids of carrots, turnips or cabbages, they get about a dime for unloading a cart of vegetables. If they are lucky enough to unload five or six before dawn and, on top of it, be given some scrap of eatable food, they can call it a night and justly celebrate in one of the nearby all-night "cafes," drinking the few pennies they have just made.

IN the morning twilight, they scatter and disappear, without anyone knowing exactly where they go. They do not know themselves, generally, as they have no regular abode. They shuffle along, either solitarily or by silent couples (being of the nontalkative type), until they find the cozy corner, the dark nook where they can keep away from civilization to sleep or rest until night falls. Some have pet places in hilly Montmartre or in old abandoned dwellings, but most of them end up on the banks of the Seine, under the hospitable arch of a bridge.

You can see them, lying down or engaged in some slow, mysterious operation along the banks, between cranes and sand heaps. Tattered and torn, like the maid of the song, they go about, with long hair and neglected beards growing around their curious, dirty faces. Oddly enough, most of them are rather old, looking much more than 50. Like the happy man of the legend, they have but one shirt, the rest of their earthly belongings being bundled up and slung over their shoulder.

It is hard to say whether they are happy or not, but they do not look miserable. It seems probable that at least a good many of them were not driven to such a state by mere hard luck. Rather than being dependent on some degrading job, they cut loose all the links that united them to civilization and chose that sort of life.

No home, no relatives, no bonds whatsoever! They have almost forgotten what the words haste and efficiency mean. They feel "free and equal."

• • • •

A FAMILIAR part of the Paris skyline is doomed to become a memory of the past when the Trocadero, famous building and the most infamous piece of architecture in Paris, according to Parisians themselves, is demolished and a new and magnificent terrace stands in its place, commanding a sweeping view over sloping gardens, the Seine River, the Champ de Mars Gardens, the majestic Ecole Militaire and the city in general.

This, no doubt, will be one of the happiest results of the 1937 International Exposition, as this altogether radical decision was reached by the Paris Municipal Council a few days ago in the name of urban beauty and the 1937 exhibition.

First intended to be a temporary structure for the exposition of 1878, the huge, bulky Trocadero palace, a bastard mixture of Spanish and Moorish styles, lasted through the world fairs of 1878, 1889, 1900, the Decorative Arts Exhibition of 1925 and the Colonial Exposition of 1931. Few will regret its passing out. The present auditorium will be built underground and the two long wings of the present Trocadero will be replaced by two modern buildings which will house not only the same museums of ethnology and comparative sculpture but also a marine and cinematographic museums.

THE BUSINESS MEN'S FRESH AIR CAMP.

Again this summer this department is conducting a fund to send American business men into the country where they can get away from it all. The first trainload left yesterday and you should have seen the look of unutterable joy and relief as the industrialists left for a spot where they will be completely cut off from all news from Washington for two weeks.

• • • •

Never has there been greater need of such a camp. No matter where you look you see bewildered, frightened and exhausted business men, barely able to move, and longing for a little relief of their own. Many of them are suffering from what is known as Circle Sickness. It comes from running around in circles in their efforts to keep track of new laws, edicts, rules, regulations, etc. Around and around they totter, making strange noises, glaring at their secretaries (incidentally something has got to be done to relieve secretaries soon) and singing, "Why was I born?" in weak, colorless voices.

• • • •

Have you done your part? If not send in your contribution to The Business Men's Fresh Air Fund at once. Every penny helps; in fact the mere tinkle of a penny would bring back the flush of health to the cheeks of many unfortunates who have had businesses of their own in this country during the past six years.

• • • •

A letter from one of the boys sent to camp yesterday came this morning. It follows:

"Dear Fresh Air Fund:

"I wish you could appreciate what it means as an American business man to be shown a little kindness. Oh, that you might look into our camp (we call it Camp Old Deal) and see how a few hours without any news of new tax proposals or anything have brightened us! We can't even hear any lawmakers on the radio!

"As soon as we arrived we threw off our cares and got into our rompers. We ran around barefooted all morning and sat on a mossy bank beside a rippling brook without the slightest fear of interference.

"Let me thank you again.

"PIONEER."

Remember $11 will give three business men two weeks' relief. The fund now stands:

make a "revenue bill" out of the measure, adding:

"I dare you to vote against it."

Then he put forward an amendment starting the surtax rate at 2 per cent on net incomes of from $1,000 to $2,000, and graduated up to 75 per cent on income over $5,000,000. He said it would raise from $400,000,000 to $500,000,000 revenue, but the House voted it down, 52 to 31.

Representative Hamilton Fish, jr. (Republican), New York, put in two amendments, after a scathing speech in which he said the House "ought to cut the bill to ribbons and rewrite it, but it won't."

"The President caught Senator Huey Long and his share-the-wealth followers in bathing and walked away with their clothes, leaving them defenseless," he had told the House. "The whole bill is organized hypocrisy and amounts to shadow-boxing and a flim-flam on the share-the-wealth people."

The New York Representative's first amendment would have frozen the top surtax rate at 66 per cent on incomes over $600,000. It was defeated, 62 to 35. His second amendment would have forbidden future issuance of tax-exempt securities, a principle the President has endorsed. It was ruled out on a point of order.

Few Members Present.

With only a handful of members present, the House continued to do business until 5:40 p. m. Minority Leader Bertrand H. Snell made the point that the House had been in continuous session for more than seven hours. When he persisted, leaders assented to an adjournment until 10 a. m. today.

Among other amendments that rode down to defeat were:

A proposal by Representative Kent E. Keller (Democrat), of Ohio, to impose a special 1 per cent tax on gross income, ruled out on a point of order.

A move by Representative Merlin Hull (Progressive), Wisconsin, to place a 15 per cent tax on all Federal salaries above $5,000 a year, defeated, 60 to 16.

An amendment by Representative John A. Martin (Democrat), of Colorado, to levy a 10 per cent tax on 1935 income.

An amendment by Representative Marion A. Zioncheck (Democrat), of Washington, to rewrite the capital gains and losses provision of the present law to close tax loopholes.

Doughton Defends Bill.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton and Democratic members of his ways and means committee, alternated in taking the floor against all amendments.

"The committee favors moderation and not confiscation," Doughton told the House. "I think this bill strikes a happy medium between those who would take nothing and those who would take everything."

Representative Samuel B. Hill (Democrat), of Washington, chairman of the Ways and Means tax sub-committee had launched a defense of the proposed graded corporation taxes and excess profits levies.

Charges that the burden of the tax will be borne by stockholders fail to take cognizance of the stock spread among small investors who have little say as to dividends and receive a negligible part of the income, Hill contended.

"The bigger the corporation, the more economic power it has," he said, "and the greater its political influence. The fact is that we have come to a point today where corporation power and influence is the greatest in the Nation."

Representative Andrew (Republican), of Massachusetts, wanted to know if the purpose of the bill is to raise revenue, discourage mass production or share the wealth. Hill said time did not permit him to go into that.

Bill Termed "Monstrosity."

Representative McFarlane asked why no provision had been made for taxing intercorporate dividends, as proposed by the President. Hill said the committee may go into that matter again at a later date.

The Republican offensive, opened Thursday by Minority Leader Snell, was renewed again by Representative Allen T. Treadway, of Massachusetts, ranking minority member of the Ways and Means Committee, who denounced the bill as a "monstrosity," and in no sense a revenue measure.

Treadway launched a few shafts at Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, who Thursday refused to commit the Administration on the House bill.

"Why didn't he analyze the bill?" asked Treadway. "Either he was ashamed to, or he couldn't."

The Massachusetts member said Morgenthau makes a practice of bringing a retinue of experts before congressional committees, and referring questions to them "with a smile."

"He doesn't have any views on anything," shouted Treadway. "I have never known of a question that he has any views on."

A running Republican fusillade was directed at Morgenthau. Following Treadway, Representative Thomas A. Jenkins (Republican), Ohio, said he "sympathized" with the poor Secretary of the Treasury.

"He couldn't prepare a tax bill," he said. "As a banker, he's a good agriculturist."

Woman Asks Delay.

Before the Senate Finance Committee, Miss Curtis drew comment of approval from two Democrats, Senator King, of Utah, and Lonergan, of Connecticut, when she suggested postponement of the tax program. King called the suggestion "sound," and Lonergan, "most sensible."

"Mothers of the country are worried, for they are beginning to realize the tremnedous burden of debt which will have to be passed on and borne by their children," Miss Curtis said.

"I know that women generally are frightened. They fear matters of great importance are being enacted in a hasty and ill-advised manner. They deplore the fact that tremendous subjects are being rushed through under such conditions as suggest poorly conceived legislation.

"Women are perfectly willing to pay a reasonable proportion of the Government tax bill, but they desire that the bill itself be reasonable and so devised that it will be in the general economic interest of all and not disastrous or destructive to the interests of many.

"The House tax bill has been in our possession for only 48 hours. It deals with a serious and important subject. Nothing would be lost to the Government if Congress took adequate time and gave the citizens of the country sufficient opportunity to understand and express their opinions on these tax proposals and delayed consideration until next January when the budget will be under consideration."

Julian D. Conover, secretary of the American Mining Congress, opposed the House graduated corporation levy and the excess profits tax, which he said would "overburden enterprise" and "tend to discourage development of mineral resources." He suggested applications of the excess profits tax to average earnings over a period of years.

One Witness for Tax.

Only one witness, Edwin Hawes, jr., of Wharton, Tex., who said he held shares in corporations, indorsed the graduated corporation tax. He said the individual, through present high income levies, has been discriminated against, not the corporation.

Another witness, Franklin W. Ganse, of Boston, said the bill should be titled "A bill to discriminate against the rich and increase unemployment."

Rubber Industry Ends Price Fixing

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Trade Commission yesterday announced that the Rubber Manufacturers Association, Inc., and 13 New York City individuals had agreed to stop certain practices carried on under NRA which the commission classed as price-fixing.

Reports of price-fixing on fire hose in the rubber goods industry attracted attention in the congressional investigation of NRA, particularly with reference to uniform prices offered the City of Milwaukee, Wis.

The industry maintained that the things done by it, the commission said, "were warranted by the code for their industry then in effect," but that it would waive hearing and not challenge the commission order.

Wiley Post Perturbed Over New Pontoons

Seattle, Aug. 2 (AP).—A scowling Wiley Post supervised installation of pontoons in place of landing wheels today on the scarlet monoplane in which he and Mrs. Post plan a vacation trip to Moscow.

Perturbed because the pontoons were not exactly what he wanted for the over-water jumps, the one-eyed air adventurer refused to divulge when he would leave or what route he would take.

"How should I know?" he countered when asked when he planned to hop from the Renton Airport, south of Seattle.

Business Pace Is Faster Than Last Summer

Leading Industries Find Upturn in Advance of Usual Period.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 2.—A general expansion of business to a higher level this week than during the similar period of last year was found in a survey issued today by Dun & Bradstreet.

"Accelerated by the unexpected upturn in the pace of operations of some of the leading industries, far in advance of the usual period for expansion, more trends reached toward a higher level than was recorded at this time a year ago," it was stated in the Review.

"Continuous high temperatures and new heat waves in some parts of the country gave retailers an opportunity to clear the remaining stocks of summer merchandise, making substantial sums of cash available for investment in fall inventories.

"Buying at wholesale was advanced by the rising current of consumer demand and the greater price stability."

Although retail trade continued at an excellent pace, it was declared, the estimated gain in sales for the country was held to a range of 10 to 30 per cent over 1934 because of the rising trend of a year ago.

"While the gains reported by some of the markets were small, general volume of wholesale orders continued to rise by a larger percentage over the comparative showing of last year," the Review found.

"Price uncertainties during July led to the postponement of so much buying that most wholesalers are making preparations for an abrupt gain during August.

"The further advance of industrial operations has lifted the average from 15 to 25 per cent higher than it was for the corresponding 1934 week.

"Employment held generally steady, with slight gains at isolated centers, although the increase was not in keeping with the advancing rate of activity."

"Cootie Coins" Held Federal Tax Omen

New York, Aug. 2.—Designating the proposed fractional currency as a "totally unnecessary nuisance," the American Banker reports that bankers are protesting against the introduction of the 1 and 5-mill pieces proposed for coinage by the Treasury, "If the proposed coinage foreshadows an Administration plan to introduce a Federal sales tax in order to balance the budget," says the newspaper, "it might be endurable, but State sales taxes do not warrant any such 'cootie coins' as are proposed."

Steel Merger Suit Dropped

Government Will Not Appeal in Republic and Corrigan Cases.

By the Associated Press.

Attorney General Cummings said yesterday that an appeal would not be taken in the Government's anti-trust case against Republic Steel Corporation, the Corrigan-McKinney Steel Co. and four other corporations.

A Federal district court in northern Ohio earlier this year denied the Government's request that the companies be prevented from making an agreement allegedly in violation of the Clayton antitrust act.

Under the agreement Republic Steel was to purchase the assets of Corrigan-McKinney, including two subsidiaries; in return, bonds and stocks of the Republic Steel Corporation were to be transferred to Corrigan-McKinney for distribution among its stockholders.

The Justice Department issued the following statement:

"This case was brought in order that the agreement should be submitted to judiciary scrutiny. It was fully tried and, under the facts as found, the court pronounced the proposed transaction legal. In view of this holding as to the particular situation developed at the trial, it has concluded that an appeal would be unavailing."

Stocks—The utilities, which reached a new high average for the year, was the only group able to withstand the pressure of selling, but the net decline was slight. The turnover was 1,515,910 shares.

Bonds—Prices were conflicting, with minor changes. Governments were lower and weakness of Italian issues was a feature. Transactions fell off to $9,210,000.

Curb—Losses outnumbered gains in active trading which totaled 307,000 shares.

Grain—Bearish crop rumors and heavy selling dropped wheat a maximum of 3⅞ cents a bushel. September closed at 90½, off 2⅝. Corn was a point higher on scarcity of supplies.

Cotton—In a dull market prices lost a little ground with net declines of 3 to 12 points. October closed at 11.45.

Coffee—The market trended lower with Santos No. 4 at 7⅛ and Rio No. 7 at 6¼. Futures were quiet.

Sugar—Raw sugar was unchanged at 3.20 for spots and refined sugar at 5.10 for fine granulated. Futures were lower.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Public Utility Stocks Advance to New High Levels but Remainder of Market Sags Under Profit Taking—Wheat Drops.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, Aug. 2.—Stocks improved again in the early trading and then went through another day of profit taking that left lower prices in all but the public utility group, which had a special reason for moving ahead. Selling was not heavy at any time, but buying ardor wasn't white-hot either. Turnover in stocks at a little over 1,500,000 shares was the smallest of the week. High-grade bonds were steady under the impact of cheap money. Commodities were uncertain. September wheat closed 2⅝ cents lower at 90⅝ cents a bushel.

Outside the strength in the public utility issues the market had only a scattered miscellany of stocks to show any price toughness. The bulk of the turnover was in the utilities, which as a group rose to new high prices. Consolidated Gas topped 30 a share, for the first time this year, on a fractional gain. Western Union was especially strong and trading in I. T. T. was large, the stock selling at a new top. Local traction issues, on the same old unification talk, also were strong.

Gains of 1 to 3 points were made by American Coal, Celanese, General American Transportation, Greyhound, Industrial Rayon, Ingersoll Rand, Neisner Brothers and U. S. Freight. The first sale in National Dairy Products preferred A stock since listing brought no change from the closing sale on the curb. Canada Dry Ginger Ale, on a poor earnings statement, dipped more than a point.

Republic Steel Firm.

Irregularly lower prices ruled among the tobaccos, foods, rubbers, oils, mail orders, equipments, amusements, chemicals, motor accessories, rails and motors. Steel and Bethlehem gave up a point or so each. Republic hardened on news that the way was open for completing its merger with Corrigan.

Instead of month-end firmness in money rates, the sharp decline in brokers' loans, the lack of an increase in commercial borrowing, and operations designed to boost excess reserves to a new high record figure of more than two and a half billions, have given the market a new sense of ease. A further decline in some rates, even in August, now would not be surprising.

Foreign currencies were generally firm against dollars. Sterling was little changed. If the stabilization fund is being used to hold the dollar in equilibrium, that job is proving to be an easy one at the moment, for the fund's chief employment is in the silver market, and silver continues unchanged day after day.

Before the year is out general business and the markets may have a practical demonstration of what an almost unlimited supply of cheap money can do to promote activity. We have had cheap money, and lots of it for the last five years, but it has done nothing more than prove the old theory that low money rates aid a business recovery once it starts, but are not in themselves capable of putting the wheels into motion. So far, cheap money has not even promoted speculation, because the foundations for successful speculation have been slow in the building. They are rising profits.

Record Excess Reserves.

This week, thanks largely to Government operations and large additions to the gold supply, excess bank reserves rose to a new peak of over two and a half billions, enough potential credit to blow the lid off the country should a boom once get under way. It is altogether probable that interest rates will decline further all round, but so far the banks have felt little of the seasonal borrowing that usually comes in at this time. Companies are well supplied with bank credits and cash, and the new capital market still is largely closed.

The business man doesn't like to spend his own money or to borrow money for expanding his business unless he feels fairly certain of profits. That feeling is better than it was, and in the first half year business profits turn out actually to have increased by 15 per cent or more, but the profit margin has not risen much, numerous industries still are finding it hard to make both ends meet, and higher taxes are under proposal. However, the trend is upward, and the stock market is making the most of it—perhaps too much of it at the moment.

Bank and Surety Stocks at Peak

New York, Aug. 2.—Responding sharply to constructive legislative developments, New York City bank stocks reached new 1935 highs during July, according to Hoit, Rose & Troster. The weighted average of 17 leading issues opened July 1 at the month's low of 44.30, and established the new 1935 high of 53.21 during the day of July 29. This compares with the previous 1935 high of 48.20 on February 18. The close, July 31, was steady at 52.62.

The best gains on a percentage basis were registered by Chase National, Continental, Chemical, Manufacturers and Central Hanover. The largest aggregate gains were shown by First National, Guaranty Trust, Central Hanover, Commercial National and New York Trust.

Insurance stocks in the New York City market again established new 1935 highs during July. After opening July 1 at tne month's low of 53.01, the weighted average of 20 respective issues reached the new 1935 high of 57.40 on July 29. The close, July 31, was slightly lower at 57.20.

Packers Explain Bond Issue Halt

Chicago, Aug. 2.—Libby, McNeill & Libby, large packers, who were expected to offer this week through a banking group headed by Field, Globe & Co., an issue of $12,500,000 refunding bonds, have sent the following notice to shareholders:

"This is to inform you that the special meeting of shareholders of Libby, McNeill & Libby, held in Portland, Me., July 30, 1935, approved the proposals submitted to the shareholders on July 2 to reorganize the capital stock of the company and to authorize the board of directors to sell a new issue of bonds to refund the outstanding bonds.

"The company will proceed to make the exchanges of stock authorized. Authority granted by the shareholders to refund the bonds will not be exercised.

"Your directors have been in touch with a group of investment bankers with reference to a refunding issue of bonds, and registration of a new issue with the Securities and Exchange Commission became effective July 31; but, inasmuch as recent market conditions did not seem favorable to the issuance of new bonds on a basis that would effect savings for the shareholders, it was decided not to proceed further at this time."

Weller Is Hit On Dual Jobs By Phoebus

'Give Up Aspirations to G. O. P. Committee,' He Demands.

Raps Nice for Putting Former Senator on Commission.

By the Associated Press.

Princess Anne, Md., Aug. 2.—State Senator Harry T. Phoebus (Republican), Somerset, announced today he would ask that O. E. Weller either drop out of the picture as a Prospective Republican National Committeeman or resign as State public service commissioner.

Weller, former United States Senator, has been nominated for the national party post by the Maryland Republican committee, but has not yet been confirmed by the national committee.

Phoebus, who has criticized the Republican State administration frequently in recent months, contended that "the Republican party has too many good men to have to make a dual system of anything giving one man two jobs." He announced recently that he would be a candidate for Republican National Committeeman from this State.

Will Write to Weller.

He said he planned to write Weller a letter at once, setting forth his stand.

"It would be much better if he resign the public service commission job and let a poor man get in there and give the people cheaper gas and electric rates," Phoebus said.

"If he (Weller) is a candidate at the State convention for national committeeman and nobody else opposes him, I certainly will run against him. I am not particularly seeking this high honor, but I am going to see that Senator Weller has opposition.

"If Gov. Nice had told the Republicans of Maryland before the primaries he was going to appoint Senator Weller public service commissioner or insist that he be elected national committeeman, Nice would never have been nominated. He would not have been nominated for the simple reason that William F. Broening, former mayor of Baltimore, George R. Norris, the leader of Baltimore County and a State-wide figure, and other Republican leaders never would have supported him.

Invokes "Rank and File."

"Senator Weller is a fine man to represent the rich people on the public service commission, but his appointment does not please the rank and file and the poor people of Maryland who have to pay the gas and electric bills.

"Senator Weller has had the highest honor the Republican Party could confer upon him and Gov. Nice has traveled over the State and told Republican leaders everywhere he was not connected with Senator Weller."

U.S. Agent Held To Grand Jury In Raid Death

Fairfax Investigator Says He Shot Fugitive in Self-Defense.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., Aug. 2.—John A. Millan, 44, of Fairfax County, investigator for the Alcoholic Tax Unit, was held today on $3,000 bond for action of the Loudoun County grand jury in October by County Coroner Dr. John A. Gibson, following an investigation into the death of Delmas Duncan, 25, who was shot Wednesday when he resisted arrest after a raid on a still in operation on Broad Run Creek, 12 miles from Leesburg.

Jack Mann, 17, a helper at the still, who was arrested after the shooting, testified that he did not see the shooting but heard one shot. Mann did not resist arrest. John H. Lemmon, Federal officer who was with Millan in the raid, testified that he did not see the shooting as he was guarding Mann at the still and the thick brush prevented his viewing the tragedy.

Millan testified that the two officers crawled up a ravine to the still, which was going full blast. A man, which he learned afterward was Duncan, arose from behind the still and ran, pursued by Millan. The chase continued to the edge of Broad Run about 50 yards away. Millan was six steps behind the fleeing man, calling to him to halt. Millan testified that Duncan swung around and snapped a gun in his face, but it failed to fire.

The chase continued a few steps and, when Duncan swung around again as if to try to use the gun, Millan said he fired. Duncan was struck near the left shoulder and died immediately. Millan said he returned to the still and told Lemmon that he had shot the man, and the three went to the place. Lemmon examined the gun, which had three bullets in it.

Mrs. A. L. Duncan and W. J. Duncan, mother and brother of the slain man, were at the inquest. No arrangements have been made for the funeral. The body is at an undertaker's home here.

Streams May Be Clear For Week-End Fishing

Baltimore, Aug. 2 (AP).—Muddy water in Western Maryland streams has spoiled fishing conditions, although most of the waters are expected to be clear over the week-end, deputy fish inspectors reported today to the State Conservation Commission.

More bluefish and trout are reported from the bay, with the catch of hardheads still good. Conditions in the upper bay are not so favorable. The Potomac in Montgomery County is expected to provide excellent sport over the week-end, the local inspector said.

Deaths of 2 In Shooting Investigated

Mr. and Mrs. Molter Found Dead in Home at Severna Park.

Six Shots Fired, Says Neighbor; 2 Inquiries Ordered.

By the Associated Press.

Severna Park, Md., Aug. 2.—Two coroners of Anne Arundel County today continued their investigations into the deaths of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Molter, who were fatally shot in their home here last night.

Plans for funeral services were being held in abeyance pending the arrival of relatives. The bodies are being held in an undertaking establishment in Baltimore and the services probably will be held there.

Police Magistrate Harrison M. Sandrock, acting coroner here, is conducting the inquiry into the death of Mrs. Molter, 51, who was found dead in their home by neighbors who had heard shots there. Molter, 66, a bullet wound in his temple, was lying near by and died in the Annapolis Emergency Hospital a few hours later. A pistol was found in his hand.

Police Magistrate Louis Strauss, acting coroner at Annapolis, is to hold the inquest into Molter's death, since he died in the hospital there. The inquest into Mrs. Molter's death probably will be held here Sunday night, Magistrate Sandrock said.

Sandrock is holding the pistol used in the shooting, the discharged cartridges and the bullets. He also has ordered that the Molter home be locked pending appointing of executors or administrators.

Six shots were fired in the Molter home, according to Charles K. Lane, a neighbor who heard the shooting and summoned help. Sandrock said today that he had accounted for every shot fired.

"I have six empty cartridges and one unfired bullet," he said. "Mrs. Molter had two bullet wounds at the base of her skull, another bullet was found in the door of the room where the shooting occurred and two more were found in the ceiling. Molter had one bullet wound in his head."

Molter was manager of the Baltimore branch of the Bradstreet Mercantile House for many years and later was associated with the Dun firm several years and owned considerable property here.

He had been in a highly nervous condition for some time and before his marriage to Mrs. Molter about a year and a half ago, was a patient at Shepherd Pratt and at the Phipps Clinic in Baltimore for the treatment of nervous trouble.

Mrs. Molter, before her marriage, was the former Mrs. Mary Grant, of New York City. Molter also had been married before.

Molter is survived by four sons and two daughters.

Free-Bridge Plan Stirs City Rivalry

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 2.—Rival contentions of Portsmouth and Norfolk over a $360,000 toll-free bridge which the State highway commission proposes to build into the latter city enlivened a public hearing on Richmond and Suffolk district allocations here this afternoon.

Dr. Vernon Brooks, mayor of Portsmouth, asserted State construction of the bridge would destroy a capital investment of nearly $3,000,000 in the Norfolk-Portsmouth ferries, owned by Portsmouth and Norfolk County, and injure a $1,000,000 private property, the South Norfolk toll bridge.

Norfolk's answer, presented by City Manager T. P. Thompson, was that approximately a half-million people in Norfolk, Princess Anne County and vicinity are now unable to reach Richmond and other parts of Virginia except by paying tolls.

The controversy arose in the afternoon session, devoted to allocations to the Suffolk district from the $13,500,000 State-Federal fund to be spent in the next year. During the morning, when funds apportioned the Richmond division were discussed, several delegates from middle Virginia counties asked larger amounts for their secondary roads.

Close Contests, Big Vote Seen In Primaries

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 2.—Primary records may be shattered in neighboring counties next Tuesday when Virginia Democrats go to the polls to name nominees for important State and county offices.

In only Fredericksburg and King George County, where there are no contests for local offices, will the balloting be light, but in Spotsylvania, Stafford, Caroline, Orange and Louisa Counties, bitter fights are anticipated.

Major sectional interest centers around the State Senatorial race between S. Bernard Coleman, of Fredericksburg, and H. H. Walton, of Louisa, who are candidates from the Twenty-seventh district. Backed by the retiring incumbent, Senator W. Worth Smith, Walton is conceded an edge in his native Louisa, while Coleman is expected to carry Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania.

Contest Close in Orange.

Hotbeds of the race will be Orange, where the result is regarded as a toss-up, and Stafford, where political observers give Coleman an edge.

Because of vigorous campaigns conducted throughout the district by both aspirants, the vote is expected far to exceed that polled in 1931.

Also to be chosen at Tuesday's election are Democratic nominees for the three sectional seats in the House of Delegates. From Stafford and Prince William, candidates are George W. Herring, incumbent, and Frank P. Moncure, Stafford attorney, and in the district comprising Caroline and King George counties, T. Elliott Campbell, of Milford, and Willing Bowie, of Bowling Green, are opponents. Campbell is seeking renomination.

Dr. Harris Unopposed.

The third House of Delegates post, that of the Fredericksburg-Spotsylvania area, finds Dr. W. A. Harris, of Spotsylvania, without opposition. The incumbent, A. W. Embrey, jr., is not a candidate.

In Spotsylvania, A. H. Crismond, clerk of the court for 25 years, is opposed by A. L. Blanton, and William R. Dillard, trial justice, is a candidate against County Treasurer Irvin C. Clore. Stafford's main local fight is between Leonard A. Briggs and A. R. Sullivan for the Democratic nomination for sheriff, a post now held by a Republican, W. E. Curtis.

Six candidates, including Joseph Baker, incumbent, have announced for sheriff in Caroline.

Of the other county officers, only Commonwealth's Attorney Bernard Mahan has competition. He is being opposed by Frank B. Beazley, of Bowling Green.

The candidates:

Spotsylvania—House of Delegates, Dr. W. A. Harris; clerk of court, A. H. Crismond, A. L. Blanton; county treasurer, Irvin C. Clore, William R. Dillard; commonwealth's attorney, Emmett R. Carnett; sheriff, Lee W. Edgerton; commissioner of revenue, R. Hugh Faulconer; for board of supervisors, Courtland district, E. J. White; Chancellor district, R. W. Hilldrup; Livingston district, V. M. Graves; Berkeley district, M. W. Mills.

Caroline—House of Delegates, T. C. Elliott Campbell, Willing Bowie; clerk of court, E. S. Coghill; county treasurer, G. R. Dorsey; commonwealth's attorney, Bernard Mahan, Frank B. Beasley; sheriff, Joseph Baker, E. M. Gray, C. B. Wright, W. L. Brooks, T. M. Crittenden, R. I. Rains; commissioner of revenue, Robert Woolfolk.

Stafford—House of Delegates, George W. Herring, Frank P. Moncure; clerk of court, James Ashby; county treasurer, Nelson N. Berry; commonwealth's attorney, G. B. Wallace; sheriff, Leonard A. Briggs, A. R. Sullivan; commissioner of revenue, R. C. L. Moncure, jr.; for board of supervisors, Hartwood district, R. H. Estes, J. R. Monroe; Rock Hill district, T. E. Courtney; Aquia district, W. F. Jones; Falmouth district M. R. Reamy.

Midshipmen To Keep Out Of 2 States

47 at Academy Due on Leave Soon Must Avoid Homes.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Aug. 2.—Because of the prevalence of infantile paralysis in Virginia and North Carolina, an order was issued at the Naval Academy today prohibiting midshipmen from entering the two States when they go on their annual leave from August 30 to September 27.

Not only will they be barred from entering the States to pass their leave period, but their parents and friends will not be allowed to visit them unless they make their visit three weeks after leaving these States.

The order will affect the midshipmen of the second class, now studying aviation at the academy, and the midshipmen of the first and third classes, who will return from a summer practice cruise about August 28.

Forty-seven midshipmen who live in Virginia and North Carolina will be unable to visit their homes.

The order issued by Capt. Bryson Bruce, acting superintendent, in the absence of Rear Admiral David Foote Sellers, supplements quarantine regulations now in effect at the academy in the case of officers, enlisted men and civilian employes, who have been in North Carolina or Virginia since June 27.

All officers and officers whose families have been in the States since that date are required to report in writing to the superintendent stating the time of their departure from the States. They also are required to place themselves in limited quarantine for three weeks, being released upon reporting to the senior medical officer of the academy.

Information Gathered On Progress of Cases

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Aug. 2.—While adding 15 reports of new cases to make Virginia's infantile paralysis total 293 since July 1, the State health department today announced information was being gathered on the progress of each case.

Dr. I. C. Riggin, State health commissioner, said an adequate accounting of the poliomyelitis spread in Virginia probably would not be available until about August 15. He said questionnaires were being sent to health officials with a request for a report on each case.

Albemarle County again bore the brunt of the latest increase, reporting eight of the cases recorded today. Five were in Charlottesville. Albemarle now has a total of 46, of which 3 are in Charlottesville.

Reports from there said parents were taking their children out of the danger zone, but a Charlottesville physician said a state of paralysis was present in only two of the cases there early this week. The outbreak is said to be in mild form throughout the State.

Other reports received today were from Greene (1), Southampton (1), Richmond City (2), and Roanoke City (3).

3 Events Cancelled At Fredericksburg

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 2. — Three important public events scheduled to take place here this month were canceled today because of the infantile paralysis situation.

They included the chamber of commerce-sponsored Farmers Day, set for August 22; the annual Elks' Charity Fair, and the annual Kiwanis Club boys' picnic. The latter event had been arranged for August 28, but no date had been definitely fixed for the Elks' Fair.

Decision to call off the gatherings as a precautionary move was reached at special meetings of the boards of directors of the three organizations this afternoon.

Also canceled today were revival services that were to have started at New Hope Baptist Church in Orange County Sunday and the entertainment planned in Spotsylvania County tomorrow night by the Mine Road Missionary Society.

All public meetings in Stafford and Spotsylvania counties were banned ten days ago by county health authorities. No paralysis cases have been reported here.

$400,000 Hagerstown Hospital To Be Ready in a Few Weeks

WashingtonCountyMedical Center to House All Health Agencies.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 2.—One of the first hospital institutions in the world that will house under one roof both preventive and curative medicines, the new Washington County Hospital building will be completed in a few weeks.

All health agencies of the county headed by Dr. W. Ross Cameron, as well as headquarters and clubrooms of the Washington County Medical Society, will have quarters in the new institution, which, when completed, will cost more than $400,000.

Immediately following the occupancy of the new 7-story, 130-bed fireproof structure, work will be started on renovation of the old hospital building in the front, which is connected with the new hospital building. The old building will be used for administrative offices and laboratory work. In a new north wing nearing completion, the emergency room will occupy the first floor and headquarters of the Medical Society will be on the second floor. The south wing will be occupied by the health department offices and laboratories, while the second floor of the wing will be used for isolation and study of contagious cases.

The new hospital will have kitchens and a refrigerating system on the first floor, the second and third floors will contain wards, the fourth, fifth and sixth floor wards, semiprivate and private rooms, while the seventh floor will be used for surgical and maternity cases. On top of the building is a spacious roof garden, which will be used for convalescing patients.

The old building was used as a hospital during the Civil War and many soldiers of both armies received treatment there. Later it became Key Mar College, a girl seminary, until its purchase some years ago for a hospital.

Bequests totaling nearly $2,000,000 in recent years made the new building possible.

Koiner Praises Work Of Soil Erosion Control

Richmond, Va., Aug. 2 (AP).—George W. Koiner, State commissioner of agriculture, said today he is "more than ever in favor of soil erosion control programs." The commissioner's comment followed a trip made several days ago to inspect the erosion control projects in Pittsylvania County.

More than 150,000 acres are being treated in Pittsylvania County now by the soil erosion experts, Koiner pointed out. The program will be expanded to include other counties in the State at an early date, he said.

White House Approval Is Signal for Rush of Delegations Here.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt signed the Virginia-California judgeship bill yesterday, and immediately there were indications that delegations will be here next week indorsing various persons for the second judgeship created in the Eastern Virginia District Federal court.

Representative Colgate Darden, of Norfolk, said a delegation from his district would be here Tuesday or Wednesday to press the claim of Judge James H. Corbett, of Suffolk.

Representative S. Otis Bland, of Newport News, said he had been requested to arrange interviews for a delegation planning to come here in behalf of State Senator R. O. Norris, of Lancaster.

Representative Montague, who was patron of the Virginia judgeship bill in the House before it was made an amendment to the California bill in the Senate, has been requested to arrange for a delegation from Richmond to convey to the Attorney General the Richmond Bar Association's indorsement of Judge Robert N. Pollard.

Judge Pollard is one of seven who have been mentioned in Richmond. Others include the city's director of public safety, John Cutchins, Randolph Tucker, W. W. Beverly, A. H. Sands, M. J. Fulton and Brockenborough Lamb.

Another delegation is expected to come here from Petersburg for Judge R. T. Wilson.

Senators Glass and Byrd have taken the position they will recommend none of the candidates unless their recommendation is requested from the White House or the Attorney General's office.

Strong Line-up For RKO-Keith Is Made Known

'Top Hat' Set for a Run; Meet Mr. Leo Carrillo; Amusement Chat.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Adding another list of imposing titles to the late summer quota of film plays to which the public may look forward with some degree of confidence that they will be a little more than ordinarily entertaining, Manager Hardie Meakin of RKO-Keith's Theater takes the floor to sound off before he bursts with pride.

There are, it seems, just as many impressive motion picture plays headed for Fifteenth street as for any other of the Capital's principal avenues of amusement. I suspect that Mr. Meakin does not include "Lady Tubbs" among his "big" pictures, although even that midsummer item is not so doleful an exhibit as some would have you believe.

However, hot on the heels of "Lady Tubbs," as the saying goes, will come "Jalna," RKO-Radio's camera rendition of Mazo de la Roche's novel of the same name that won the Atlantic Monthly's $10,000 award. It is the story of the Whiteoak family of "Jalna" and sets forth an epic of hate, jealously, tragedy and comedy, the full portent of which, it is expected, will be realized by the members of a cast that contains many names of distinction—among them Ian Hunter, C. Aubrey Smith, Nigel Bruce, recently seen in both "Becky Sharp," with Miriam Hopkins, and "She," with Helen Gahagan; Peggy Wood, Kay Johnson and Jessie Ralph, remembered for her Peggotty in "David Copperfield."

Miss Hepburn's Next.

Following "Jalna" to the Keith screen will come "Alice Adams," the screen version of the Booth Tarkington story, in which the title role will be played by Katharine Hepburn, who is said here to have the most satisfactory assignment since "Little Women." In this picture, Fred Stone, veteran of the musical comedy stage and last season's star of the Lewises' "Jayhawker," will make his debut in celluloid. Fred MacMurray will be seen in the romantic lead, opposite Miss Hepburn, and Evelyn Venable also is in the cast.

"The 39 Steps" is next on Mr. Meakin's list and if the title conveys nothing of immediate importance, then it will be necessary to go on and say that this is the Gaumont British subject in which Robert Donat, star of "The Count of Monte Cristo," will be seen, with Madeleine Carroll playing opposite.

And then, "Top Hat." This, of course, is the new Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers song-and-dance business with tunes and lyrics by that past master at this sort of thing, Irving Berlin.

Helen for Fun!

Adding the fillip of her distinctive brand of funmaking to the gay measure of this sprightly fillum will be Helen Broderick, one of the traditional theater's most amusing comediennes.

It will be recalled that "Roberta" ran for five weeks at RKO-Keith's. The management expects "Top Hat" to prove itself "tops" by right of conquest as well as name, and is laying its plans for that kind of an engagement.

Regardless of the length of run enjoyed by "Top Hat," it will be followed in due course by Edward Arnold in "Diamond Jim," the pictorial biography of James Buchanan Brady, the most fabulous figure along the Broadway of the gay nineties and early 1900's; the spectacular production of "The Last Days of Pompeii," "The Three Musketeers," Lionel Barrymore in "The Return of Peter Grimm," one of the outstanding successes of the two Davids of an earlier day, Belasco and Warfield, and Irene Dunne in the new production of "Show Boat."

Perhaps it is no wonder that Mr. Meakin "views with pride," instead of the more conventional alarm!

The days of intensive rehearsals are at hand for that third, annual, all-Washington revue, "Going Native," to be presented on the stage at Loew's Fox a week from today. Beginning Sunday, the boys and girls of the cast and chorus will have their hours, as well as their hands, full.

At 10 a. m., on that day, the entire company will be assembled on the stage of the Fox for an outline and sketchy rehearsal of the show's routine. From that time on, principals and chorus will be kept at it hammer and tongs, whatever that is, at the Fox, at the Joe Brown studios, on the stage of the National and even down the river on the Wilson Line steamer, City of Washington.

Next Thursday will be left open for makeup rehearsals and final costume fittings, but at 8:30 a. m., next Friday, August 9, opening date, the company will go at it again and run through the entire revue preparatory to putting on the first public performance later in the day.

Just one continuous round of pleasure, this show business! Ask anybody.

Meet Senor Carrillo.

A chuckling troubadour of the footlights and Kliegs—Dapper Dan, with the "a" long after the manner of the Spanish tongue, which, of course, would make it Dapper Don—such is Leo Carrillo, who arrives in town from Detroit this morning for a week of personal appearances on the stage of the Earle Theater.

He has been characterized as a seventeenth century haciendado—which is by way of being a land-owner—with a twenty-first century sense of humor. He has the theater written all over him, but began life as an engineer. Someone in San Francisco heard him telling dialect stories and forthwith catapulted him into vaudeville. Then came the so-called legitimate stage and "Lombardi, Ltd.," followed by other successful plays and, finally, pictures and such hits as "Viva Villa," with Wally Beery, and "Love Me Forever," with Grace Moore.

Dots and Dashes.

But there is too much to tell about him to stay in long sentences. He is a descendant of five generations of California dons . . . owns a gorgeous ranch in southern California . . . Best friend is his neighbor, Will Rogers . . . Plays polo . . . Would rather sit on a corral fence than in the seats of the mighty . . . Complexion, dark . . . Figure slightly rotund . . . Probably one of the few actors who is a bona fide socialite . . . Gets great kick out of wearing Mexican clothes . . . Adores Edith . . . That would be Mrs. Carrillo . . . Never at a loss for a funny story . . . Can tell them in 20 dialects . . . Are there 20 dialects? . . . Stages big barbecue parties . . . Some of them have been in the newsreels . . . Once worked as a cartoonist . . . Also as a surveyor . . . Also as a writer . . . Plays a guitar . . . Famous in the screen colony as an amateur cook . . . Enjoys duck hunting . . . Is the only actor in the Wagas Duck Club, composed of millionaires . . . His daughter's name is Antoinette . . . And if she takes after her dad, she is swell people.!

My best opportunity to estimate the genial qualities of this distinguished gentleman was aboard that perambulating madhouse known to the trade as the "Forty-second Street Special"—that nightmare of blazing lights and squawking gadgets that brought a trainload of Hollywood stars to Washington for President Roosevelt's inauguration.

Six Hours of Bedlam!

I boarded that ghastly nerve-shocker in Baltimore at 5 a. m., and spent the ensuing six and one-half hours wondering why those who had been on it all the way from the Coast were not either dead or stark, staring maniacs.

By the time we found a parking spot on the spur of track down by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, about 11:30 by the clock, I had had all of the "Forty-second Street Special" I felt the system needed.

But there was this Carrillo fellow as bland, as undisturbed, as happy and as contagiously humorous as though he had made the trip across the continent in his own private car, instead of in that rolling bedlam.

That next night he took part in Daniel Frohman's Actors' Fund Benefit at the Belasco—along with William Faversham, Noel Coward and Beatrice Lillie, Cecilia Loftus, the Duncan Sisters, Fannie Ward, Montagu Love, Frances Starr, Robert Emmett Keane and a few score more—and was one of the hits of the bill.

But that is a habit of Leo Carrillo's, as you will learn at the Earle this week, if you do not already know it.

There has come to hand a copy of the August issue of the New Theater Magazine, a publication seemingly closely allied with that slightly radical "new theater" group dedicating its talents to social drama, films and dance, which is as delightfully outspoken as any organ of the playhouse that has fallen under these dimming eyes for many a long day. The feature article is a blistering treatise upon the activities of a writer who is described as "the Hollywood stooge" of a noted publisher. It is recommened to those who prefer their film colony revelations printed on asbestos. Rather a nice piece of writing, at that, as cutting, cat-o'-nine-tails castigations go.

Musical Cocktail.

Before the summer season of barge concerts by Dr. Kindler's National Symphony Orchestra is brought to a close, it would be fun if Paul Whiteman could be brought down from wherever he is to mix a few musical cocktails such as he did in Philadelphia last Monday night, when he waved the baton in front of the combined forces of his own orchestra and the Philadelphia Symphony.

It was all part of the management's plan of "hopping up" the type of program given in previous years—the symphony management's, that is.

The neo-classic composers were abundantly represented on Mr. Whiteman's program. Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" competed closely with Chopin's "Minute" waltz. Strains of the Strausses' "Blue Danube" and "My Hero" gave way to Beethoven and Gounod; "The Good Old Summertime," "Sidewalks of New York" and "Three O'Clock in the Morning" pepped up another group of numbers.

Catholicity of Taste.

Joined with "The Continental" in the dance types were "Dusk" and "The Duke Insists." Immediately following was "Deep Purple."

Other numbers were "Land of Superstition," from "Darkest Africa" (Grant Still) and excerpts from Ferde Grofe's "Grand Canyon Suite."

And in addition to all that, the Whiteman boys and girls put on their "Meet the Band" specialty, introducing Buddy Linn, Frank Trambauer, Jack Teagarden and Johnny Hauser, "The King's Men," Ramona, Durrelle Alexander, Robert Lawrence, "Goldie" and Mike Pingatore—all heard here recently when Whiteman headlined the stage bill at the Earle.

So, how's about it, Mr. Cappel?

Continues on Screen at Palace

This mischievous young lady, masquerading for the moment as the picayunish superintendent of the orphanage in which she is the tinder-box, is to be seen for a second week, beginning today, on the screen of Loew's Palace Theater. Her name, needless to say, is Shirley Temple and her picture is "Curly Top," in which she does the most mature work she has ever brought to the silver sheet. John Boles and Rochelle Hudson add their voices to tiny Miss Temple's to enliven the action with frequent bursts of song.

Leading From a Tenace.

All players are taught to avoid leading from tenaces. To lead the Queen from an Ace-Queen-ten combination violates almost all general principles of play. Yet there are many cases in which this lead is proper, both by the opening leader and by his partner. Today's hand is a striking illustration of one of these situations.

South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ 6 4 3 2 ♡ 9 7 6 5 ◇ 9 7 2 ♣ K 4
♠ K 9 8 ♡ 10 4 ◇ A K J 5 3 ♣ A 6 2	W E S N	♠ J 7 5 ♡ K J 8 2 ◇ Q ♣ Q J 9 5 3
	♠ A Q 10 ♡ A Q 3 ◇ 10 8 6 4 ♣ 10 8 7

South	West	North	East
Pass	1◇	Pass	1♡(1)
Pass	1NT(2)	Pass	2♣(3)
Pass	2NT(4)	Pass	3NT(5)
Pass	Pass	Pass

1—East is to weak to respond with two clubs, which requires two honor tricks. But this does not prevent his making a One-over-One response in his four-card suit. The bidding situation here is very interesting, for although usually a five-card suit is bid before a four-card suit, when too weak for a bid in the five-card suit, the shorter suit may be shown first.

2—A better bid by West would have been two diamonds. His one-notrump rebid shows his balanced distribution but hides the strength of his rebiddable diamond suit.

3—With East's hand, there is a very close question between passing one notrump and bidding two clubs. The fact that he has honors in all four suits determined his choice.

4—Having underbid by bidding only one notrump, West now makes an attempt for game.

5—East is too weak to return to any suit, not having been supported, and decides to gamble for just one trick more in notrump.

The Play.

North opened the seven of hearts and West played a low card from dummy. South began looking for the five tricks which would defeat the contract. The first he took with the Queen of hearts. He had two Aces which would win and he hoped North would have an entry in either diamonds or clubs. If North had this entry, the establishment of one more spade trick would defeat the contract. Therefore, South's next play was the Queen of spades. He knew that if West covered with the King, the Ace and ten would form a tenace over dummy's Jack, and if North got the lead to play another spade, the setting trick could easily be won. Of course, if the Queen of spades held the trick it would itself furnish the necessary extra trick required.

West took the King of spades, led to the Queen of diamonds and finessed for the King of clubs. The finesses lost and a spade lead through the Jack defeated three no-trump and justified South's unusual play.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

IT MUST be the heat. Anyhow, we were surprised at the following letter, inasmuch as it bore a Washington postmark. If it had come from some isolated village where people know virtually nothing of Federal employes, it would not have been such a surprise.

BAKER.

"I usually read your columns in The Washington Post," writes the citizen who signs herself as "Poor and Broke, but a Loyal American."

". . . Are all Civil Service employes imbued with the idea that once having passed an examination they are entitled thenceforth forevermore to special privileges from Uncle Sam, regardless of his other obligations and the condition of the country at large?

"Is there not one single champion for Uncle Sam among his Civil Service workers?

"What a relief it would be to read in your columns something like the following:

"My dear Mr. Baker:

"I am a Civil Service worker and I want you to know that I am grateful for the salary which I receive from Uncle Sam. While I would like to receive more money, I realize there are many competent and deserving people entirely without jobs, and I fell that Uncle Sam's money for jobs should be shared.

"I am grateful for my two weeks' vacation with pay. I would like more time, but I realize that most business firms grant only this length of time.

"I am grateful for my month's yearly sick leave with pay, for I realize that most business firms are unable to grant employes this extra consideration.

"I am grateful for the fact that when my salary is due I know I will receive it the day it is due, for I know that many people have difficulty in collecting what they earn.

"To sum up, I am grateful, Uncle Sam, and I thank you.

"(Signed) JOHN DOE."

Now, this column is open to not one but a series of replies to "Poor and Broke, But a Loyal American" from Government workers. Letters must not be longer than 200 words and each communication must be signed and have an address. However, on publication, if the writer requests it, initials or pen names will be used. A pair of tickets to one of Loew's theaters will be awarded to the writer of each reply that is printed.

Every day we set forth the worthy cause of the Government employe. Let's have some new ideas to dispel the distorted view the author of the foregoing letter has of civil service workers.

Employes at Register's Office, Treasury, are mourning the death Thursday of Edward B. Queen, who was elevator operator for many years. His faithful and unfailing courteous service will be missed.

When the Coast and Geodetic Survey's interdepartmental tennis team plays a match there is no mistaking its identity. Each player wears a shirt with a C. G. S. monogram on the pocket, making quite a trim display.

Friends on Capitol Hill,
Please stand by!
Our worthy leave bill
Must not die!
We are weary and worn,
Our morale is low;
Our efficiency suffers—
We're depressed and slow.
We long for that home
In a far-away State,
Where relatives and friends
now impatiently wait.
We yearn for vacations,
And change of scene;
For this unceasing grind
Arouses our spleen.
Before you adjourn—
Please pass our leave bill;
Grant us your blessing,
And hearty good will.

Mattie Richards Tyler (F),
Register's Officer, Treasury.

Federal Meeting in South.

One of the largest meetings of Government employes ever held in the South last night heard Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, explain the legislative situation with particular reference to the leave bills and the merit system. The assembly was held in Atlanta under auspices of NFFE Local No. 122.

Mr. Steward also outlined the issues which will come up for consideration at the thirteenth biennial convention of the NFFE at Yellowstone National Park in September.

On his way North from Atlanta, Mr. Steward will stop at Columbia, S. C., where he will be the guest of honor at a dinner to be given Monday under auspices of Local No. 460. Plans have been made for Mr. Steward to address several gatherings of Federal employes in Columbia and vicinity. Before leaving Washington, the employe leader expressed confidence that the annual and sick leave bills will be passed by the House during the coming week.

Marshall Heads New York Group, Submits Bid for Braves

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

IT was within earshot of Mr. Pete Marshall that the talk turned to modern-day baseball stars. That was unfortunate. Mr. Marshall, who has been tapping out news reports on the same telegraph key for nigh onto 49 years, screwed up his countenance, cleanly pinged a cuspidor at 20 paces and, all in all, emitted an emphatic and unmistakable "Phooie!"

POVICH.

Well, what was the idea?

For 30 seconds, Mr. Marshall didn't speak, probably for want of the proper expletives. He only fulminated. And then he began to spout.

"You guys make me laugh," he said. Mr. Marshall accompanied his opening remarks with a veritable cascade of rich, brown tobacco juice that sent even the lead-bottomed gaboon spinning uncertainly. He watched it right itself, obviously pleased with his aim, and began again:

"Why these dime-a-dozen ball players you see out there now shouldn't be mentioned in the same breath with those lads I used to watch play. You make heroes out of 'em when they're bums. They smack that lively ball around, and you think they're sluggers. I've watched baseball from every press box in the league and from press boxes that aren't in the league any more, and I've seen real stars."

Who for instance? Some guy innocent in the ways of Pete Marshall made the mistake of asking that question, and Mr. Marshall was off again on his favorite topic. Ping! and the rich, brown fluid hit its mark again. Pete reached for a new cut of his favorite plug and there was no stopping him:

"ALL RIGHT, who've you got on first base now? Yeah, I know. Jimmy Foxx, Lou Gehrig and Hank Greenberg. Now ain't that a fine lot. Not a first baseman in the bunch. Yeah, I know all about their hitting, but they're all a lot of tangle-feet around that bag. They'd all trip over their beards if they didn't shave every day. How ya gonna compare 'em with the guys I saw.

"It's a laugh. George Sisler could spot 'em all two strikes and outhit 'em before his eyes went back on him. And he could go get balls they couldn't touch with a vaulting pole. It's a close fit between Sisler and Hal Chase, but I'd have to take Sisler. And after him, well, Joe Judge.

"Look at your second basemen. Charley Gehringer is the only second baseman the American League has seen in the last 20 years, and hes not one-two-three-four with Nap Lajoie. There was a ball player for you. And if he'd a-been hittin' aganist that lively ball, why they'd never get him out today. Buddy Myer's a good boy, but he's far from great.

"And so Joe Cronin is your best shortstop, ho-ho. That's the tip-off. Why this Cronin couldn't carry Bobby Wallace's bat. When Wallace was with the Browns he could hit .290 and keep Cronin out of a job. And he could go and get balls toward second and third that Cronin wouldn't have the nerve to try for. As far as that goes, the best shortstop you've seen in 15 years was old Roger Peck.

"DID you ever see Bill Bradley? Well, then, you never saw the game's greatest third baseman. When he was with Cleveland the only thing that got past him was a single to right field. And if you don't like Bradley you can have Jimmy Collins of the old Red Sox, or Larry Gardner of the old Indians. The only fellow who could hold a candle to 'em was Joe Dugan and he's been out of the league for ten years. These third basemen you've got—" Pete spat viciously and mentioned something about Ossie Bluege not being able to hit.

"Take your outfielders. You take 'em, I don't want 'em. Take your Vosmiks, your Simmons', your Chapmans and your Manush's. I'll take those three old goys Cobb, Speaker and Ruth, and if they won't do I'll toss in Harry Hooper, Duffy Lewis and Tris Speaker. Where ya gonna match them? Where ya gonna match them, I say. Ho-ho.

"Pitchers—well, I guess ya got me there. I gotta admit that Lefty Grove's the best left-hander that ever set foot in the box. I mean he used to be. That old smoke ball of his'n was something. But you never saw the likes of a right-hander like Walter Johnson. And show me somebody to match Chief Bender, Jack Coombs, Jack Chesbro and Big Ed Walsh. Show me 'em, that's all.

It seems that the monologue finally narrowed down to catchers. For a minute, old Pete was flustered. The gaboon, still wabbling unsteadily, paid the penalty for Pete's momentary confusion. He bathed it with a stream of the fruits of the leaf. Pete spat once more, and then looked around, smiling beningly. "Dammit," he said. "Rollie Hemsley's the best catcher that ever put on a masn in the American League."

Broaca Holds Harrismen To 8 Hits

Three-Run Rally in 6th Ends After Chapman Traps Fly Ball.

New Yorkers Gain Half Game on Idle Tigers in Flag Chase.

By Shirley Povich.

THE Yankees beat Washington yesterday, 9 to 4. The only thing close about the ball game was the escape of the Washington pitchers from serious injury.

Thirteen New York base hits whistled past the ears of Irving Hadley and Jack Russell as the Yankees scored by twos in the second, third, fourth and sixth innings and tapered off with a single run in the seventh.

It was Ladies Day at Griffith Stadium and the Nats were extremely lady-like with their own bats. Against the bespectacled Johnny Broaca, Washington was shut out until the sixth inning, but later did manage to make a few runs that were about as useful as a third strike.

Broaca held the Nats to eight hits and lifted the Yankees a half game nearer the idle Detroit Tigers, whose lead was cut to three games.

Big Chance Muffed.

Washington muffed its biggest chance to reinstate itself in the ball game in the sixth inning through little fault of its own. With the Yankees leading, 6-0, and the Nats in the midst of a three-run uprising, the rally expired when Washington base runners were led to believe that Ben Chapman had made a spectacular catch of Cliff Bolton's line drive to center.

Thinking Chapman had made the catch, Travis tagged up at third base and delayed scoring until he saw the ball in the center fielder's glove. Red Kress, seeing Travis delay his run, halted between second and third, and when Umpire Owens ruled that Chapman had not caught the ball but had trapped it, Kress was run down and tagged out. The bottom thus dropped from the rally.

The Yanks didn't delay long in assaulting Hadley. Tony Lazzeri smacked his twelfth home run of the season into the center field bleachers in the third inning, and with two out, Jess Hill gained credit for a home run when Miles draped himself over the right field boxes after a long run for his fly near the right field foul line.

Plenty of Hits.

New York boosted its 2-0 lead to 4-0 in the fourth with the aid of singles by Dickey, Lazzeri and Broaca and in the fifth it was 6-0 after Rolfe singled, Gehrig walked, Kress made a wild throw on a force play and Selkirk doubled over Powell's head.

Manager Bucky Harris did not hesitate long in using a pinch hitter for Hadley in the fifth and Leon Pettit turned back the Yanks in the sixth. Then it was that the Nats jolted Broaca out of his shutout dreams.

Buddy Myer launched the inning with his third straight hit, a single to right, and Powell walked. Manush was no help, but Gehrig muffed Travis' hard drive for an error and Myer scored. Kress bashed a single to center to score Powell and then the rally began to peter out at its climax.

Chapman came in fast and appeared to have made a sensational catch of Polton's liner to center, but to the surprise of Kress, who had started to race back to first base, the umpire ruled it a trapped ball and a relay to the infield caught Kress for the second out of the inning after Travis scored. Pinch Hitter Johnny Stone terminated the threat with a mild pop to Rolfe.

With their lead cut to 6-3, the Yanks immediately assaulted Russell for two runs in the seventh and another in the eighth on hits too numerous to mention.

Browns Defeat Chisox, 10-8; West Star

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 2.—Sam West's home run with Ray Pepper on base, hit at the expense of Vern Kennedy in the eighth inning, cashed in on Russ Van Atta's three innings of shut-out relief pitching today and gave the St. Louis Browns a 10-to-8 victory over the White Sox.

Pepper previously made a home run off Sam Jones in the fourth inning and, scoring ahead of West in the eighth, broke an 8-to-8 tie. The lead exchanged hands or the score was tied six times in the wild and wooly game that saw the Browns pound Jones, Wyatt and Kennedy for 17 hits, and the White Sox rout Cain, Knott and Thomas before Van Atta stepped to the mound in the seventh, purposely passed the first batter to face him, filling the bases with none out, and then retired the next nine batters in order, striking out four of them.

The defeat, the Chicagoans, second in a row, tumbled them two games behind the second-place Yankees and five games behind the leading Tigers.

Parker, Hall Meet in N. Y. Tennis Final

By the Associated Press.

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 2. A 19-year-old schoolboy and a veteran nearly twice his age will battle for the Meadow Club's historic singles bowl tomorrow.

Frankie Parker, Spring Lake, N. J., star, who is top-seeded and the fourth ranking player of the country, earned a place in the final round for the second year in a row this afternoon when he outlasted Clifford Sutter, of Detroit, Mich., eighth ranking player of the country, 6—2, 2—6, 6—2, 6—2.

J. Gilbert Hall, of Orange, N. J., the veteran, gained his titular round by coming back strongly after a tough third set with Henry Culley, of Santa Barbara, Calif., and, like Parker, showing the greater stamina in the stretch. He triumphed by 6—3, 6—0, 14—16, 6—2 scores.

Parker's match with Sutter was a keen, stroking duel, with the Detroit veteran wavering after the second set because of lack of condition.

Sutter tried to play to Parker's weak forehand and for a while got good results. But when he tired, his shots weren't paceful enough, and Frankie's chops and pat forehand were able to pass the Midwestener when he attempted to take the net.

Hall's hard driving off both wings, with most of his shots aimed for the corners or the lines, sent Culley down to defeat. The Californian battled gamely against the severe game of his opponent, pulling the third set out of the jaws of defeat.

The third and fourth seeded teams went to the finals of the doubles tourney. Bitsy Grant and Hall won by default from Sutter and Guy Cheng, and then took a five-set decision from Wilmer Hines and Culley, 6—4, 0—6, 3—6, 6—3, 6—2.

Shute, Ghezzi Shoot a 62 At Toledo

Beat Parks, Laffoon, 8 Up; Picard, Revolta Take Tourney Lead.

By the Associated Press.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Aug. 2.—Denny Shute, of Chicago, and Vic Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J., burned up the soaking-wet Inverness layout today with a best ball of 62, nine under par, and dragged Sam Parks, National Open champion, and Ky Laffoon out of the lead in the round-robin match play in which 16 of America's leading pros are participating.

Parks and Laffoon, who started the match with a "plus five" edge as a result of their first two matches, were eight down to the former British Open champion and Ghezzi, and wound up the day with a "minus three" standing.

The open champion and his mate didn't have a chance. They halved the first five holes in par figures and then Shute slipped in with a birdie three to take the sixth. Ghezzi's putter began working on the next two and he was in with a birdie three and a birdie two to take both. Shute and Ghezzi had birdie fours on the ninth to take that.

Four Birdies in Row.

The tenth was halved and then Shute came through with a birdie to take the twelfth. Then Ghezzi went on another rampage to count four more birdies in a row, only one of them being matched by Parks and Laffoon.

The open titleholder and his partner were eight down at the finish, although their best ball clipped a stroke off even figures.

Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., and Johnny Revolta, of Milwaukee, took the lead at the end of the day's play with a plus 4 total for the first three 18-hole matches, in which each of the eight two-somes is being paired against each other.

The standing, with three of the seven rounds of matches out of the way, is:

Picard and Revolta, plus 4.
Ghezzi and Shute, plus 2.
Espinosa and Burke, plus 1.
Cooper and Smith, even.
Hagen and Walrous, even.
Armour and Cruickshank, minus 2.
Diegel and Thomson, minus 2.
Faffoon and Parks, minus 3.

Italian Moguls Attack Carnera's 'Drug' Charge

Rome, Aug. 2 (U.P.).—The Italian Boxing Federation issued a communique today deploring statements by Primo Carnera, former heavyweight champion, that he had been drugged in his recent fight with Joe Louis, Detroit Negro.

"As such irregularities exist only in Carnera's imagination," the federation said, "the federation deplores Carnera's attitude and warns him not to make further similar statements in order to avoid adoption of disciplinary measures."

Giants Top Braves, Allowing Five Hits

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 2.—With Clydell Castleman and Allyn Stout combining to pitch five-hit ball, the New York Giants strengthened their position at the top of the National League today by defeating the Boston Braves, 4 to 1, in the opener of a four-game series.

Mel Ott was the spearhead of the Giants' 12-hit attack off Bob Smith and Huck Betts. He parked his twenty-fourth homer in the upper right field stands in the second and smashed out a double in the sixth to send Bill Terry across the plate and run his total of runs driven in to 83 for the season.

Fuchs' Career With Braves Closes in Note of Sadness

By a Special Correspondent.

BOSTON, Aug. 2.—There is a something infinitely sad in the passing from baseball's limelight of the colorful Judge Fuchs, former president of the Boston Braves.

When, at the stroke of 12 last night, his claim to ownership of the cellar dwelling National Leaguers came to an end, the baseball career of a true lover of the national pastime came to a bitter close.

Emil Fuchs' first connection with baseball was as a catcher on a semi-pro team in that section of his native New York, where he and former Gov. Smith grew up as boys. Fuchs later prepared for the bar and became allied with organized ball as attorney for the New York Giants.

When the Braves were on the market 13 years ago, the East Side New York boy, now a successful lawyer, realized his life's ambition and became the owner of the club which this week cast him aside in favor of the new blood and new financing it so sadly needed.

This morning a new shingle was attached to the directory of a Boston office building. It bore the legend, "Emil Fuchs, Counselor at Law." But it conveyed something beyond that simple announcement to baseball folk, for it meant the passing of a beloved character who for many years had sought to bear the financial burden of a tail-end baseball club.

Some hours before the venerable judge entered the vale of baseball oblivion he went to the Braves' dressing room to say his tearful farewell to the boys who make up the team. There were symptoms of heart break in his voice when he thanked them for their loyalty and told them of his regret at having to pronounce his farewell.

"I can't expect treatment which is denied others," Judge Fuchs said later. "I've sacrificed everything. Now that I have been forced to surrender, I've got to start all over again. I've kept in touch with legal practice. I have friends in New York who wish me to take up my old work there. And I probably shall try to develop practice in both cities. The airplane, you know, makes that possible."

Printers Depart For U. S. Tourney

Confident of bringing another title back to the Capital, the Union Printers baseball team left last night for Cleveland, where it will defend its national championship in the annual typo tournament, starting tomorrow. The local team's opponent will not be known until tonight, when the pairings will be drawn, but Manager Norman Hutchinson has named Tom Heany to pitch in the opening contest.

Of late the typos have been clicking at a fast pace and, barring further injuries, like the loss of Jimmy Dewhurst, whose injured leg will keep him out of the tourney, they may retain the laurels.

The printers will take the field with Reverdy McPherson behind the bat, Fred Waple at first, Johnny Reed at second, Eddie Edwards at shortstop, Ray Homan at third, Benny Schneider, Tom Dalgish and Al McAlwee in the outfield, and Heany on the mound. George Roudabush and George Mosedale also are expected to take their turn on the mound.

Strafaci and Coria Gain Golf Final

Defeat Tomes, 11 and 9, and Russell, 4 and 2, in Semifinals.

By Dave Herman.
A Staff Correspondent.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 2.—Frank Strafaci, sensational 18-year-old Brooklyn High School golfer, and Joe Coria, 24-year-old St. Paul picnic grounds policeman, entered the finals of the National Public Links championship here today, and will clash over the 36-hole route tomorrow for the crown which Dave Mitchell, home-town boy, lost in the heat of yesterday's hectic firing.

Strafaci, a curly-haired, diminutive Italian boy who is a protege of Wiffy Cox, new Washington, D. C. professional, turned on the heat against Robert Tomes, of Long Beach, Calif., and blasted him into defeat by the overwhelming count of 11 and 9.

Limping around the course with blistered feet, Coria eliminated the Indianapolis champion, Bill Russell, 4 and 2, in a match that was followed by a gallery of more than 1,500 spectators.

Takes Lead of 6-Up.

Strictly a "dark horse," Strafaci played championship golf to win his semifinals match. In the morning the little Italian boy shot a 74 to take a commanding six-up lead on his Pacific Coast rival. He was five up at the end of nine holes, and when Tomes regained his stride on the incoming side to score a 35, one over par, Strafaci proved equal to the occasion and refused to crack.

Tomes, 34, unemployed, a veteran of Public Links championships, virtually conceded defeat as he teed off this afternoon.

"I'm playing the new champion—and he's the finest golfer I ever met," the Californian remarked.

Little Mercy on Rival.

Strafaci had little mercy on his rival. He drove a 320-yard screamer down the first fairway, parked his second shot 10 feet from the pin, and canned his putt for a birdie to go 7 up.

The Brooklyn lad picked up three additional holes, lost the seventh hole, and came back with a brilliant birdie on the eighth hole to become 10 up again.

Tomes, shrugging his shoulders, knocked a bad drive off the twenty-seventh hole, a 445-yarder. It

Cincinnati Rookie Blanks Cubs, 8 to 0

Cincinnati, Aug. 2.—The Chicago Cubs suffered their first whitewashing since July 5 today, young Gene Schott, of the Cincinnati Reds, blanking them, 8 to 0.

Schott, a rookie, held the Cubs to only four hits, and only one Cub, Galan, in the first inning, ever saw third base.

The Reds pounded Bill Lee for four runs. They treated Tom Casey even more unkindly, filling the bases twice in a 4-run spurt in the eighth.

D. C. Laundry Magnate, Grid Owner, Declines to Bare Amount.

McKechnie's Job Safe, in Any Event, Belief of Baseball Men.

AN offer to buy the controlling interest in the Boston Braves was made last night by George Preston Marshall, Washington sportsman and laundry magnate, who long has had a yen to identify himself with big-league baseball.

Marshall announced he had been chosen to represent and head a group of New York men interested in the Braves. His attorney, he said, had conferred with C. F. Adams, controlling stockholder in the Braves, by long-distance telephone last night; at which time the offer was made.

Refusing to divulge the amount of his offer, Marshall pointed out that the reported price of $750,000 on the Braves was "fabulous." His group, he said, was interested only in purchasing the controlling interest now held by Adams and reported valued at $285,000.

Under Marshall's plan of purchase, Adams would remain as a minority stockholder in the Boston club.

Fuchs Resigns Post.

The tangled affairs of the Braves were cleared somewhat yesterday when Judge Emil Fuchs was unable to meet the final $100,000 note due Adams, who had advanced capital for the upkeep of the club, and resigned his office as president.

In Boston, where President Ford Frick, of the National League, has been conferring with Adams for several days, they issued a joint statement guaranteeing the maintenance of the club in the league:

"While we realize that it is difficult to step out and immediately strengthen a ball club, we do want the fans of Boston to know that efforts are being now made to improve the club both as to playing strength and morale."

Owns Pro Grid Team.

Marshall, who has dabbled extensively in professional sports, now owns a 55 per cent interest in the Boston Redskins of the National Professional Football League. He formerly owned the Washington Palace Club of the National Professional Basket Ball League.

"I believe that Mr. Adams is receptive to my offer," said Marshall, "but I know that he is considering at least one offer from another source. I feel, though, that my proposition will be given serious consideration inasmuch as it was Ford Frick who was chiefly instrumental in persuading me to make the offer."

Marshall was not prepared to

By the Associated Press.

East Hampton, N. Y., Aug. 2—Both top-seeded favorites came through in straight sets this afternoon as the semi-final brackets were completed in the Maidston Club's annual invitation tennis tournament.

Mrs. Ethel Burkhart Arnold, of Los Angeles, seeded first, crushed Mrs. Mary Greef Harris, of Kansas City, Mo., 6—3, 6—0. She plays Gracyn Wheeler, of Santa Monica, Calif., tomorrow.

Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Boston, earned the right to clash with Caroline Babcock, of Los Angeles, when she showed the best form she has exhibited this season to whip her fellow townswoman, Katherine Winthrop, 6—1, 6—4.

In the doubles competition, all the favorites came through to the semifinals. Carolin Babcock and Mrs. Dorothy Andrus of Stamford, Conn., showed fine teamwork and brilliant net play to whip Helen Pedersen, of Stamford, Conn., and Mrs. Penelope McBride, of Short Hills, N. J., 6—1, 6—2.

Dodgers Beat Phillies In Series Opener, 8-3

Philadelphia, Aug. 2 (AP).—Scoring four of their runs in the first inning without hitting a ball out of the infield, the Brooklyn Dodgers defeated the Phillies, 8 to 3, in the opening game of the series today.

Ralph Boyle, who in the sixth hit a homer, got the only blow of the initial frame and it was an infield hit to Gomez. Bucky Walter and his successor, John Pezzullo, handed out two passes, Dolph Camilli made three errors and the Dodgers worked a double steal to score their runs.

Chewawa Wins Third in Row at Suffolk, Scoring by ¾ Length

Midshipman Is Second in Feature

Jockey of Second-Place Horse Files Protest, Is Overruled.

By the Associated Press.

SUFFOLK DOWNS, Boston, Aug. 2.—Scoring her third straight victory of the waning meeting, Chewawa, chestnut filly from the E. T. Burke Stable, scampered home today with three-quarters of a length margin in the Beaconsfield, the mile and a sixteenth route feature of the Friday program. Behind the winner was Midshipman, whose jockey entered a protest against Chewawa for an obvious bump coming up the stretch.

Jockey Deering entered the protest, but the stewards ruled against him. Behind Midshipman, but a length and a half in front of Propagandist, was Xandra, that did well in the closing stages. Propagandist was claimed by J. B. Partridge after the race.

Chewawa broke on top and rushing to the turn received some opposition from Moralist, but that horse dropped out of the running when Laidley pulled wide on the turn, and Hanford, on the winner, was able to save considerable ground by hugging the rail. Coming down the front panel Midshipman showed signs of power and attempted to pass the winning filly.

That horse lugged over to the rail, bumping Midshipman and it was thought he would be disqualified, but such was not the case. It was on that offense that Deering based his claim and he was backed by Midshipman's owner, R. Curran.

Distance Events At Charles Town

Steeplechase Horses to Vie at 4-Day Race Meeting.

A race each day at steeplechase distances and weights will be one of the features of the four-day meeting at Charles Town track, which opens next Wednesday. Believing that many of the horse enthusiasts of the Virginia hunting section would be interested in such events, the Charles Town Horse Show and Racing Association put those races in the condition book. Twenty-nine races are scheduled for the meeting, which will be under license of the West Virginia Racing Commission. Seven races will be run on the first three days, with eight on Saturday. Post time will be 2:30 o'clock. The daily double, as usual, will be on the first and third races.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad will run its race special to the track each day, leaving Union Station at 12:30 o'clock.

QUICK, forwardly placed all the way, continued determinedly to the end. BROPHY went to the front at once, drew clear in the first furlong, was rated along in front under slight restraint and was in hand at the end. ONWARD, in closest attendance of the leader throughout, held on willingly to the close. SATURNINO was well placed all the way, though never able to endanger the first two. CHEWAWA went to the front at once, drew clear straightening out on the back stretch, was steadied along in front, bore over when straightening out in the stretch, impeded MIDSHIPMAN and held the latter safe at the end. MIDSHIPMAN followed in close pursuit of the winner from almost the start, came through on the inside, closed gamely and, though bothered in the stretch, continued gamely to the close. XANDRA, restrained early, closed willingly, but was unable to reach the first two. PROPAGANDIST never could improve his position in the drive. MORALIST tired. SAND BABY never was a serious threat.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:05. Off at once. Winner, J. TOMFOOLERY, under steadying restraint for the first half-mile, moved up gradually on the outside thereafter, came willingly in the stretch and outlasted RELATIVITY at the end. The latter taken up repeatedly and forced to work her way through when back stretch movement was almost blocked. PREFER went to the front straightening out on the back stretch, opened up a good lead, but was unable to maintain her advantage under pressure. TEENIE R., in close quarters going to the first turn, worked her way up steadily, loomed up threatening on the outside in the last furlong.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED LABEL, $12.60, $9.40, $7.00; YANCEY, $36.80, $17.40; CEYLON, $20.40.

RED LABEL moved up stoutly after straightening out on the back stretch, wore down CEYLON for the lead, fought it out courageously and outlasted YANCEY at the end. The latter moved up stoutly, showed in front nearing the finish and just failed to last. CEYLON went to the front in the run to the first turn, was rated along under slight restraint, but was unable to keep pace in the closing drive. BRIGHT BIRD faltered after leaving the back stretch.

Baltimore and Richmond Golfers Play Local Clubs Tomorrow

Indian Spring And Beaver Dam Hosts

Play for Cox Trophy to Begin Today at Kenwood Club.

THE season for inter-club play is taking Washington more or less by storm. Tomorrow will see both Beaver Dam and Indian Spring facing the invasion of visiting teams, with Beaver Dam set to meet the strong Hermitage Club of Richmond, and Indian Spring the Hillendale Club of Baltimore.

It will be Beaver Dam's second team match of the summer. At least three more team matches are slated for the club, one with Kenwood, August 18, another with Manor a week later, and a return engagement with Hermitage at a date to be arranged.

Army and Navy Club yesterday announced its entrance into the inter-club play although a schedule has not yet been definitely arranged. Maj. C. M. Beck and Capt. Yeats are preparing a card for the club team at the present time. Several local clubs are expected to form the opposition.

A team of nearly 30 low-handicap men will comprise the Hermitage forces to visit Beaver Dam. The two feature matches promise to throw Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam pro, against Tom Galloway, Hermitage pro, with Billy Howell, Virginia State amateur champion, expected to face Martin McCarthy, the District's outstanding simon-pure.

Beaver Dam, fresh from its 22½ to 4½ conquest of Manor last week in its first start, will also number the following among its players: John Miller, Forrest Thompson, Jim Baggett, Max Taylor, Everett Johns, Russ Brown, Doug Madison, D. N. Pratt, N. J. Wilson, Ray Fleming, A. Snyder, Dr. McCullough, J. M. Palmer, Everett Johnson, Joe Balestri, Bettew, Dave Morris, Dan Hutchinson, J. Hoover, Glen Strong, C. Purdy, L. L. Menne, Harry Bailey, Jack Palmer, E. C. Bailey and W. J. Labille.

Labille is conducting the inter-club campaign.

The Indian Spring-Hillendale fracas will include women's as well as men's teams. A force of ten feminine representatives is being brought by the Baltimore club to meet the local females. It will be the first of a home-and-home series with Charlie Batcheler, visiting pro, meeting either Roland Mackenzie, Indian Spring playing pro, or George Diffenbaugh in the No. 1 match. The men's teams will number about 50 strong apiece.

In the meantime, Kenwood golfers will be sharpening their eyes and shortening their scores in the form of a new club tournament to open today. Club officials said yesterday the event will be known as the Wiffy Cox Tournament, to be conducted annually. A silver loving cup, to be labeled the Wiffy Cox Trophy, awaits the winner.

The tournament will be a seven-day event at 18-hole match play, the qualifying rounds to be held today and tomorrow. Competition is to be held in Classes A, B and C. More than 50 members are signed up for the tee-off.

Russ Hollebaugh rules the favorite in the top class, with Ted Rulley, Charlie Cole, Bernie Hallock and possibly Maury Fitzgerald standing as his chief threats. Matches may be played at any time so long as they are completed by the specified hour.

Despite the team matches scheduled tomorrow, particular interest is centered on the match at Columbia Country Club in which Bob Barnett, of Chevy Chase, and Wiffy Cox, of Kenwood, play Fred McCloud, Columbia pro, and Roland Mackenzie, Congressional pro. The match will start at 2:15 p. m., marking the first engagement between the teams, both of which are newly formed.

Army and Navy Country Club is already making preparations for its club championship tournament, though it is several weeks away. At least two other tournaments are to be held in the fall, definite announcement of which is forthcoming. The weekly handicap tournament for members will be held today.

Two Beaver Dam golfers set new records for themselves yesterday while playing together. C. Francis Owens, who has been playing golf 15 years, broke 80 for the first time in his uneventful career, shooting a 37-40—77. His partner, A. J. Doyle, for the first time in his life holed a shot made from off the green. On the ninth hole, Doyle seized a mashie, lifted the pellet out of a ditch 100-yards and into the hole for a birdie 3.

Mrs. J. O. Rhyne and Mrs. J. J. McCarthy won the Class A best ball with handicap match play against par at Congressional yesterday. The winners were 9-up on par. In Class B Mrs. F. A. Woodis and Mrs. G. F. Goetzman finished in the van, 7 up on par. Requiring but 32 strokes on the greens, Mrs. F. G. Owalt won the prize for low number of putts.

Mrs. Frank B. Helan broke 100 for the first time and Mrs. J. T. Powell broke 90 for the first time in the miniature tournament at Manor Club yesterday and they finished first and second with scores of 99-26—72 and 89-12—77. Helen Cranston won on the inside nine with 46-10—36.

Sir Malcolm To Seek Mark In Utah

To Alternate Record Tries With Capt. Eyston Next Month.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—A two-ring circus of record-breaking under the broiling sun of Utah's Salt Desert, planned as the greatest show in the history of automobile speed racing, is the September aim of Sir Malcolm Campbell and Capt. George Eyston, Britain's swifest drivers.

The speed kings announced their plans today—to sail together August 21, Campbell to shoot again at his dream of 300 miles an hour in the veteran Bluebird; Eyston to tackle every mark between that one and 24 hours.

Filled with glowing accounts of the Bonneville Salt Flats surface by his friend, John Cobb, who recently set 21 new distance records there, Campbell is confident that Old Lady Bluebird, the six-ton thunder wagon that roared to the present land speed record of 276.816 on the sands of Daytona Beach last winter, finally will carry him this time over a mile in 12 seconds flat—300 miles an hour.

Confident of Record.

"I'm sure I'll beat 300 this time," Campbell said today. "Then I'll chuck up racing and stick to business."

The 50-year-old Englishman, who has no challenger today for speed over a measured mile, has made a few alterations in Bluebird since his return from Florida. There have been no real changes in design, however, the streamlined blue monster with the four rear wheels still packing 2,500 horsepower under the hood.

When Campbell left Daytona his chief concern was for tires that would stand up under the terrific heat and centrifugal pressure of 300 miles an hour. Daytona's sands tore his tire threads to shreds. There never was much question of the car's ability to travel 300 miles an hour if the rubber held out.

Has Set 200 Records.

Capt. Eyston, who in the last nine years has set 200 records, more than any other living man, will alternate record tries with Campbell. Eyston will drive a fearsome looking front-drive Juggernaut, powered with a 400-horsepower Rolls Royce aviation engine. The car is 23 feet long, and is believed capable of a sustained speed of 200 miles an hour. It is streamlined to the utmost, from blunted shark-like nose to narrow tail. Its tanks carry 46 gallons of gasoline, giving it a 500-mile range without refueling.

Eyston believes that he can average 160 miles an hour or higher for 24 hours and is bringing Albert Denly along to drive relief. So minute have been his preparations that he even has had a hydraulic shock absorber installed on his foot throttle to aid in maintaining an even speed.

Reservoir in Tower.

They plan to set up their gasoline reservoir on a tall tower, with two lines running down to the tanks to facilitate fueling.

Campbell decided last winter that he had exhausted the speed possibilities of a sand beach, such as Daytona's, where for years he had been boosting the record for the measured mile. At close to 300 miles an hour it seemed impossible to avoid wheel slippage no matter how hard packed the sand surface was.

He was delighted by Cobb's glowing reports of the rock-like surface and the unlimited distances available at the salt beds for straightways. Campbell believes it will take him 8 miles to get Bluebird up to her maximum entering the measured mile the day he "breaks 300," with another 8 needed to slow to a stop.

Net Titles Won By Contreras And March

Two-Set Finals Mark Play for Playground Senior, Junior Crowns.

EASTERN HIGH SCHOOL'S Bill Contreras and Harry March, Tech High's high jumper and tennis player, yesterday carried off the City Playground Junior and Senior championships, respectively.

Contreras, representing Virginia Avenue playground, replaced Nate Ritzenberg as senior title holder with a 6—1, 6—1 victory over Eugene Owens, Western High School's No. 1 netman. The victory came as something of an upset on the face of the records of the two players.

March, Maryland junior champion, won handily from his teammate, Bill Spanton, 6—1, 6—4, in the junior final and succeeded Allie Ritzenberg as the champion. March played under the colors of the Burroughs playground, where he first picked up the fundamentals of the court game. Spanton also played for Burroughs.

Owens, representing Mitchell Park, offered little opposition to the rapidly improving Cantreras, whose even stroking off the ground completely riddled the Northwest boy's attack.

Gerardstown Winner.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 2.—Gerardstown A. C. won its fourth straight game by defeating the Charles Town Cardinals at Charles Town, 6-1, yesterday.

Danno Serious; Scribes Quit Funny Talk

By Bill McCormick.

THE rise to eminence of Damaging Danno O'Mahoney, the Irish lad who recently wrested the heavyweight grappling championship from Jim Londos and Ed (Don) George, threatens to revolutionize the business of writing wrestling.

Before Danno, who meets Joe Savoldi in a title bout at Griffith Stadium next Tuesday night, came to these shores from Erin, it was the vogue among sports writers to wax as facetious as possible in describing the antics of modern matmen.

Of course the sports writers could hardly be blamed for their attitude. It is pretty difficult to watch a 300-pound trained athlete fall writhing to the floor from a powder-puff backhand slap without chortling. And the sight of an equally imposing hulk tearing his hair and weeping piteously because someone is squeezing his arm a bit is equally mirth-provoking.

Changes All This.

Danno, me bye, has changed all this. He indulges in a modicum of the usual hippodroming antics which so amused many of the cash customers and most of those viewing the proceedings on press passes. True, he did for a while specialize in an "Irish whip," which to all apparent intents and purposes was just about as damaging as the little kiddies' game of crack-the-whip, after which it was fashioned, but that bit of business has gradually been pushed more or less into the background.

The O'Mahoney of today, the wrestler who tossed Jim Londos and Ed (Don) George in rapid succession to become the first undisputed title holder in six years, is as serious and dead-panned about his work as is that frozen-faced boxing star, Joe Louis.

O'Mahoney becomes entangled in plenty of holds, but instead of wasting any time in unnecessary histrionics, he sets immediately about the business of extricating himself.

Savoldi, too, is a serious performer, but his repertoire includes one bit of business which, while very spectacular, apparently is much feared. We refer, of course, to Jumping Joe's famous drop kick.

Just how feared this business is was demonstrated yesterday, when Jack McGrath, O'Mahoney's manager, made an eleventh-hour effort to have it barred in next Tuesday's match.

Attacks Drop Kick.

"Is it possible for you to have Savoldi's drop kick barred?" McGrath wired Promoter Joe Turner. "We do not believe this football tactic constitutes any part of wrestling. Serious injury is liable to come from such a weapon. That is the Illinois commission refused to permit Savoldi to use it, and, as a result, Savoldi ran out of a bout with O'Mahoney there three weeks ago."

Turner will insist that Jumping Joe be allowed to employ the drop kick against the champion here.

The Nineteenth Hole Is Moved Outdoors

Strafaci, Coria Meet Today For Title

When the Californian realized he was hopelessly outclassed, and his ball was in a bad position, he conceded the match without playing out the hole.

Strafaci shot the last nine in even par, and thus was only 4 over par for the entire day.

Off the fairway only twice, Strafaci had only two three-putt greens, the seventh and seventeenth, and did not meander into a single trap.

As a matter of fact, the Brooklynite said today he had not been in a trap during his previous five matches.

A seven on the fourth, which he lost, and a six on the seventh, which he won, prevented Strafaci from shooting the outgoing side of the morning round in even par. He dropped only two holes on the back side, and only four during the 27 holes of play.

Always in Lead.

Coria, State Open champion and semifinalist in the 1934 National Public Links tournament, always led his Indianapolis adversary. He was one up at the end of nine holes, as both went out in ragged 42s, and completed the morning round with a three-up advantage, thanks to a brilliant 35, which included birdies on the tenth and twelfth.

But the scoring in this match was nothing to brag about for the first 18 holes, as Coria shot a 77 and Russell a 79.

The home folks cheered heartily for their boy, Russell, in the afternoon, but to no avail. Coria was just a better golfer. Russell, however, looked dangerous after the first four holes of the nightcap round. He rolled in a 15-footer for a birdie three on the twentieth, and fired another birdie on the twenty-second, both resulting in wins.

Irons Working Well.

Coria's delicate touch with the irons worked like magic on the twenty-third and twenty-fourth, and he won both holes with birdies, the former with a deuce to go three up again.

On the twenty-fifth, Coria was trapped on his drive, and took a 6 as Russell won the hole with a par 5. The St. Paul copper captured the twenty-seventh with a par four.

Russell found himself 3 down after shooting a 35. Coria also had 35.

Russell took the twenty-eighth with a birdie 4, but dropped the thirtieth and thirty-first. The Indianapolis golfer captured the fourteenth with a 5 to a 6, and they halved the fifteenth in par 3s.

Knocks In Foe's Ball.

The finish really was dramatic.

Here on the sixteenth, "Laggoon" hole, where many a golfer has come to grief, both players reached the green in 3. Russell was 20 feet from the pin, and Coria was about 4 inches away—a remarkable shot by the Minnesota boy. Russell then knocked Coria's ball into the cup for a birdie 3, and Coria won the match.

For the last 16 holes Coria was 2 over par, and Russell 4 over par.

Red Sox May Give Gordon Freas Trial

Heurich Players Is Natural Hitter, Says Cronin.

A brief workout with the Boston Red Sox on their last visit to Washington may win Gordon Freas, University of Maryland student, a trip south with that club next spring.

Freas, 18-year-old member of the Heurich Brewers, Post Association Club, found favor in the eyes of Joe Cronin, Boston pilot, who pronounced the lad a natural hitter. Freas is a first baseman and one of the leading batsmen in the Industrial League.

60 Cavaliers Start Drills Labor Day

Va. Gridmen Have Three Weeks Before Game With W. and M.

By the Associated Press.

UNIVERSITY, Va., Aug. 2.—One month from today the Virginia football squad will gather on Lambeth Field for the first practice in preparation to play the ten games on the 1935 schedule.

Head Coach Gus Tebell and "Butch" Slaughter, his first assistant, are now checking over a list of some 60 gridiron candidates, most of whom they plan to invite back for a period of conditioning before the university session begins.

The Cavalier footballers will have only three weeks from Labor Day, when first practice is permitted under Southern Conference regulations, until the opening game with William and Mary is played, September 21.

For the first time in many years the Virginians will open a season away from home. This game with the Indians will serve to dedicate the new football stadium now being constructed for the historic college of William and Mary.

The Cavaliers also make another departure from usual gridiron procedure when they play a Thursday game with Navy in Annapolis on October 10. This contest, first scheduled for October 12, was moved forward in order to make it a feature of the Navy Day celebration.

Virginia's complete 1935 schedule

October 5, Davidson at Charlottesville; 10, Navy at Annapolis; 19, St. Johns at Charlottesville; 26, Virginia Military Institute at Charlottesville.

November 2, Maryland at home; 9, Washington and Lee at Lexington; 16, Virginia Polytechnic Institute at Charlottesville; 28, North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Marshall Makes Offer for Braves

forecast what steps he would take to improve the Braves, should his offer be accepted. He said, however, that his contract with Fenway Park, where the Redskins play their home games, does not expire until the end of the 1935 football season and thus he would be unable to move the games to Braves field this season.

Under the ownership of Marshall's group and at the suggestion of League President Frick, the Braves would enter the night baseball field for a portion of their home games, it was said. Night games have proven vastly profitable in Cincinnati.

In view of the close friendship between Adams and Bill McKechnie, present manager of the Braves, any transfer of the controlling interest that Adams might make would be contingent upon the retention of McKechnie as manager of the club, baseball men believe.

Adams, wealthy Boston sportsman, also is the owner of several New England dog tracks and two professional hockey clubs and owns the beauteous Suffolk Downs race track in Revere.

Cleveland Farm Signs Cassell, Front Royal

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal, Va., Aug. 2.—"Bobby" Cassell, one of the first-string pitchers of the Front Royal All-Stars, has gone to the Williamson, N. C., club for the balance of the 1935 season.

The Williamson club is a farm for the Cleveland Indians of the American League. About 10 days ago, Walter Johnson, manager of the Indians, called Cassell to Washington when his team was playing there and looked him over in batting practice. He decided to send him on to Williamson. Cassell is a right-hander with a fast ball.

"Bennie" Huffman, Front Royal catcher and outfielder, declined an opportunity to go to Williamson and will finish the season with Front Royal.

Dixie Gridmen Stay Closer To Home

More Intra-League Tilts on Autumn Program of Southern Conference.

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 2.—Approximately one-half of the 95 football games Southern Conference teams will play next fall will be against foes within the league, with most of the schools apparently concentrating on a title bid rather than short cuts to glory through victories in intersectional contests.

Most of the teams are staying closer to home and several of them, notably Washington and Lee and Clemson, have patterned seemingly easier schedules than their 1934 programs.

Forty-seven intraleague clashes are scheduled—three more than were played last year—with Virginia Tech's Gobblers setting the pace with seven conference games. Washington and Lee, North Carolina, Duke, South Carolina and Virginia have five league games scheduled. Maryland, V. M. I. and N. C. State face four conference clashes and Clemson will play only three.

One month from today the call to practice will ring through the ten Southern Conference camps, leaving only three weeks of preparation for most teams before embarking on the season's campaigning.

W. & L. Cuts Schedule.

Washington and Lee's Generals, defending champions, although they play only eight games this season—knocking Kentucky, Princeton and Navy off the card and adding Duke and Center—face tougher going within the circuit with five league games on the program. In addition to Duke the Generals have Conference games scheduled with Virginia Tech, Virginia, Maryland and South Carolina.

North Carolina, runner-up a year ago, is adding Maryland and Virginia Military to the list and cutting off Kentucky and Georgia. Other loop games will pit the Tarheels against N. C. State, Duke and Virginia.

Duke has a tough ten-game schedule which includes five Conference games and three with Southeastern Conference rivals—Georgia Tech, Auburn and Tennessee—but interleague tilts for most teams will be less numerous than they were a year ago.

Only ten games are carded with Southeastern rivals as against 15 last year. Clemson, dropping Georgia Tech and Kentucky, and North Carolina dropping Kentucky and Georgia, lead in the divorce rate.

Although intersectional games will be the exception rather than the rule, Maryland's Old Liners, anticipating a strong team, have games booked at Baltimore with Indiana and Syracuse. N. C. State will play Manhattan at Brooklyn, and Virginia Military will battle Columbia at New York.

Chesapeake Loses To Front Royal

Stankus Scatters Hits as All-Stars Win, 6-3.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal, Va., Aug. 2.—Ability to bunch their hits successfully gave the Front Royal All-Stars a 6-to-3 victory over the touring Chesapeakes, of West Point, Va., here this afternoon. Joe Stankus scattered the visitors' eight hits discreetly, allowing as many as two hits in only two innings, the first and sixth.

The Stars, led by Chub Stephens, raked Lefty Scott for nine hits, climaxing their attack in the sixth, with three runs on as many hits.

Chesapeake took a 2-0 lead in the first two innings, only to have the locals go ahead in the fifth, after which they were never headed.

The game scheduled for Saturday with the Majestic Radio nine of Washington has been canceled. Heurich Brewers will be met here on Sunday in a double-header.

"Out Fishin'" ∫ ∫

By Jack Hawley.

A FEW days ago I advised my brother anglers that fishing conditions beginning August 1 would improve to the extent that what you had put into your fishing trip since early spring would be returned to you twofold. This was not a mere gesture on the writer's part, but a true statement.

This week has already started fishing off on the right foot, judging from the excellent reports being received. The successful angler (providing clear weather prevails, minus high winds other than north or east, both of which are detrimental to good fishing) will make his appearance on the bay not later than the crack of dawn. This is the beginning and the ideal time for large trout and will continue for another two months.

The writer has had more success in using the dark skin of the peeler crab for bait. However, other baits are uniformly good. There is usually a lull after 9 a. m. and things begin to quiet down until along about 5 p. m. This, however, need not prevent you from getting out your trolling tackle and making ready for a try at the bluefish, the aristocrat of the bay and a wary fish he is. Ask your captain if blues have been sighted within the past two days, and, if so, look for them feeding on the surface. They are easily sighted on a clear or slightly overcast day.

The following lures may be used with success: Japanese feathered baits, hook not larger than an 8 naught, smaller than this and a blue has little difficulty after several jumps in throwing the hook. This can be more accurately gaged by the size of the fish observed breaking or after one or two have been caught. A No. 5 Pflueger record spoon with free-swinging hook is about right for size on blues weighing less than 4 pounds. Increase the size of spoon used over that weight.

Free-Swinging Hook.

The free-swinging hook has the advantage of being more difficult to throw in that the blue can not hold the spoon rigid during his attempt as the hook prevents the leverage needed, the spoon dropping of its own weight. Some may differ in this opinion and prefer the many types on the market that are securely screwed and fastened to the spoon. As the saying goes, "blues will hit anything when they are hungry," and this is correct. A few strands of red-and-white string yarn tied above the hook will answer the purpose very well in all cases of emergency.

Probably more bluefish are lost by anglers either through their ignorance of facts or hesitation in requesting the captain of the boat after receiving a strike to throw his motor into neutral or better to stop the boat entirely. The speed of the boat forces the angler to put more effort into getting his fish landed, adds to your difficulty in reeling in your line and drags the fish through the water, giving him every opportunity to jump frequently and a much better chance of throwing the hook or pulling loose from it.

Many Fish Lost.

With a dead motor you can readily land your fish and have more sport playing him. How many blues have you seen brought to within 15 feet of the boat and get away just because of the three or four knots speed of the boat traveling in the same direction? The captain is always ready to please you and don't hesitate to ask him questions or request him to respect your wishes.

H. G. and J. L. Goode, W. H. Craig, O. K. Heiser and Ray Ward, jr., landed 76 rockfish while out with Capt. Pearson, of Kenwood Beach, Thursday. The fish weighed from 2 to 3 pounds each.

Bluefish are in abundance at practically every place on the bay, irrespective of which side you care to fish on. Schools are running very large, with the largest size fish near Point Lookout and points south. Above Point Lookout the blues are probably more numerous, but smaller in size, weighing from 2½ to 3 pounds each, with numerous small rock now breaking around Herring Bay. Good sport for the bait caster or fly fisherman.

Capts. Albert Ward and Bob Birchett, of Herring Bay, made nice catches of blues yesterday. Reports are too numerous for publication, but all very enthusiastic over the good news that the fish are biting ravenously. Trout, bluefish and croakers of the larger size will keep the anglers bury this week-end and here is hoping the elements behave themselves so we can all enjoy a treat.

Group to Oppose Tax on Used Cars

Maryland Association Will Defend Members.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 2.—The Maryland Automobile Trade Association will aid its members in contesting any suit brought by the State comptroller for collection of the 1 per cent gross receipts tax on used car sales, John E. Raine, general manager of the association, said today.

Attorney General Herbert O. O'Conor ruled today that used-car dealers must pay the tax. Officials of the State comptroller's office said today they would institute suit if necessary to collect it.

Raine, who left Baltimore today for a conference with Comptroller William S. Gordy, jr., on the matter, pointed out that automobile dealers were exempted from the gross receipts tax. The 1 per cent titling tax was enacted to cover that, he said.

Courtney Ryley Cooper's '10,000 Public Enemies'

Chapter XX—The Amazing Career of Frank Nash

There was a burglary in Hobart, Okla., 22 years ago, in which three men were accused. One of them was a town character named Nollie Wartman. A second was a person of the same type, Guy Huber, and the third was a tall, slope-shouldered fellow with a big nose, thinning hair and ingratiating grin, called Frank Nash.

Respectable parents had given him something of a background and a fair education. He drank too much, thus leading to financial troubles, which he overcame by the expedient of stealing. At last Nollie Wartman implicated Huber and himself in thefts from three stores and a railway station. The trial, however, resulted in acquittal.

"We ought to do something to Nollie," Frank said, after it was over. Guy Huber agreed. They lured Wartman to the outskirts of town where, it was alleged, they shot him. Nash and Huber were tried for murder and convicted. Here Huber departs from this recital:

On September 13, 1913, Nash became, as the sob sisters love to say, only a nameless number, sentenced to spend the remainder of his life behind the cold, gray walls of McAlester Penitentiary. Within five years, there was a tremendous interest in Frank Nash, brought about by a family doctor, a prison physician, and other interests. It seems this young man was threatened with death by tuberculosis. The governor speedily commuted Nash's life sentence to ten years. Then Frank announced that he had applied for enlistment in the United States Army, to fight for his country, whereupon he was almost immediately given a full pardon. It seems that he did go to France. What happened to the threat of death by tuberculosis cannot be determined.

Again Becomes Nameless Number.

He soon came back to America and within little more than a year after his patriotic pardon was identified as one of three men who had broken into the Corn State Bank at Corn, Okla., and blown open the safe. For this offense, he again was convicted and sentenced to become only a nameless number behind the now familiar, cold gray stone walls of McAlester Penitentiary. He remained a number for less than three years, during the latter part of which time he made application for freedom.

Some time before this, a friend of the cell block and mess hall had escaped from McAlester. A former cattle rustler, he now operated from a hide-out in the Osage Hills, with a desperate gang and a consequent heavy toll upon the banks of Oklahoma. Already, the newspapers likened him to the more notorious of the old-time outlaws. His name was Al Spencer.

Nash got more than he asked. The Governor announced that this prisoner "had been offered a fine position with a hay and grain firm," and immediately commuted his 25-year sentence to 5 years, which, with time off for good behavior, meant immediate freedom. On December 30, 1922, Nash waved farewell to McAlester, proceeding at once to celebrate the birth of a New Year with Al Spencer and his gang at their hide-out in the hills. It was not long before he had become Spencer's chief aid. Earl Thayer and Grover Durrill were other important members of the crew, which numbered seven men. Now, with Frank Nash as an adviser, the speed and efficiency of bank robbing shot suddenly upward, augmenting Al Spencer's record until it mounted to 42 looted banks within two years. Then temptation disturbed the harmony of the bandit crew. Spencer told his gang they must hold up a train.

One by One Caught or Killed.

Wily Frank Nash argued against it. He was overruled.

A train of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas system, carrying money and mails, was flagged down near Okesa, not far from the Osage hide-out. Six guns boomed, engineer and fireman stood with their hands upraised; a mail clerk was injured. Then, to the bellow of their guns and high-pitched cries, the gang rode away with its loot.

This was the first Oklahoma train robbery in years. Law-enforcement bodies everywhere centered upon the hunt. Methods of pursuit had improved since the old days. One by one the gang was captured or killed—except for Frank Nash.

For months they sought him in every part of the United States. At last one day, near Sierra Blanca on the Mexican border, United States Marshal Alva McDonald swerved his horse at the sight of a lone rider fording his mount across the muddy Rio Grande in the wake of wading cattle. Gun drawn, the marshal waited until the man was nearly upon him. Then he shouted his command to surrender. Frank Nash swung from his saddle for the last time. This was the end of old-time outlawry; new methods were to be his, when next he rode; automobiles rather than horseflesh, automatics and machine guns to take the place of the old-fashioned six-shooters; night clubs and resorts for hide-outs, instead of rough camps in the Osages or along the banks of the Rio Grande. He was sentenced to the United States Penitentiary at Leavenworth. This also was for 25 years.

The picture of any prison as a place of silent, sodden submission is largely untrue. Circumstances over which directors and wardens have no control have made them to a large degree huge factories, efficient only to the extent that their inmates are efficient—which means an eternal undercurrent of disloyalty, mental rebellion hidden by a superficial attitude of resignation, all of which leads to persistent and widespread intrigue.

Average Prison Undermanned.

Therefore, in discussing penal institutions, one should not discuss the men who run them, but the system by which civilization demands they be conducted.

The average prison is necessarily undermanned. There are too few guards. They are poorly paid and faced with constant temptations, as are the civilian employes. They know that they can get 15 per cent of all money they smuggle into the prison from outside contracts. Letters are worth $1 apiece, either going or coming by what is known as the underground route; urgent messages, especially when an escape is being planned, often bring $5.

There is always a tremendous market for cocaine, morphine, heroin and marihuana. A bottle of liquor brings five times its price on the outside. A gun is worth a minimum of $100.

Convicts often man the telephone switchboards. They work in the warden's office. Trusties do clerical labor. They sometimes even act as sub-bosses in shops, being permitted to move about at will, conversing with whom they please. These occupations are all possible avenues of intrigue.

Thus, when Frank Nash went to Leavenworth for the Okesa train robbery, it was to meet old friends and make new ones. There were members of the old Al Spencer gang, among them Earl Thayer and Grover Durrill. He saw them often. After a few years, during which time Nash's personality had made him known throughout the entire convict body, two new men came into his group of close associates. He was deeply interested in what they had to say about crime methods under the Capone regime in Chicago.

These men also were train robbers. One was named Francis L. Keating, alias Jimmy. The other was Thomas Holden. They had been convicted in 1928 and had 23 years to serve.

Jimmy Keating—he rarely used the name of Francis—was the talkative one of the pair. A former taxi driver, good-looking, full-muscled and with a constant supply of humor even here in the penitentiary, he formed a center to which the Oklahoma convicts gravitated whenever possible. Holden, only slightly older, was more solid and much more dour. He had been an automobile salesman and was well educated. He spoke only at intervals, his silence broken by a queer, restless gesture, as he ran his fingers through tousled brown hair.

Decides to Try Modern Methods.

One day he told how they did things up Chicago way.

In the first place, they didn't hole up in any hideout camp in the woods after a robbery. There were too many other places to go—that hotel in St. Paul, for instance, with an ex-convict as the proprietor and ex-convicts as guests. Or a dozen resorts in Minnesota and Wisconsin, some of which were owned by politicians, others by night club owners, still others by ex-convicts, supposedly catering to fishermen and hunters, but in reality gaining their livelihood from criminals who were willing to pay heavily for the privilege of enjoying themselves while evading the law. Then Keating said, in his usual jubilant fashion:

"So you burned bonds, eh? What we do is pass 'em over to one of the boys who runs a night club, see? Then he hands 'em on to one of the big bootleggers. The bootie passes 'em up to Canada for liquor and by the time they get back, the banks have forgotten all about them ever being listed as stolen."

Holden added curtly:

"Sometimes you don't have to go to that trouble. I know a couple of bankers who'll use 'em as security for school funds."

"Sure," added Jimmy, "and a few big business men who'll buy 'em up cheap and lay 'em away for a year or so in a safety deposit box."

"Fifty, sixty, seventy cents on the dollar—sometimes only twenty," answered Keating. "But what the hell, it's money, isn't it?"

All this interested the Oklahoma crowd. Gray-clad men were shuffling now; the exercise period was over. Frank Nash walked thoughtfully; it seemed he had missed a number of opportunities by being merely an Oklahoma bandit.

Forges Name On Trusty Pass.

After that his always good record became even better. He read more of the classics from the prison library; wardens like gentle, studious prisoners. Bald now, somewhat fattish, ever more genial, he soon was headed for what he sought—the run of the prison.

There was another Oklahoman in Leavenworth who enjoyed extra privileges, a blue-eyed, brown-haired, good-looking fellow of 30, named George Kelly Barnes, later known as Machine Gun Kelly—he gained the gunning ability as a result of the World War. Kelly worked in the photography section of the record room, along with Charlie Harmon, a two-time convict from Texas. Several times Nash, Kelly and Harmon talked over the ease with which a trusty pass could be forged, if a convict had friends in the record room. The bandit later mentioned it to Keating and Holden.

A few weeks later, George Kelly, big, amiable, pleasant-mannered, went into a deputy warden's office on an errand. When he left, he carried concealed in his prison uniform several blank trusty passes.

In the record room, Charlie Harmon forged the warden's name. With the civilian head of the room away, Kelly took photographs of the two convicts and placed them on their cards. Then Keating and Holden were gone.

Shortly afterward, Frank Nash, who was now a trusty, received an underground letter. It told him that the fields were green outside and many things lying around to be picked off. The friend said he owned an automobile.

"Come by for me some evening," Nash requested and named the day.

"Sure," answered the friend; with eager step and servile mien, he hurried away to show the guards how prison had reformed him.

On The Air Today

This week has been filled with announcements of new fall radio shows. Today brings the word that the Mills Brothers will return to the air early in October. The Negro quartet is now in England, where engagements will keep them busy until about September 1. They have just been honored by a command performance before the King and Queen.

In case you've forgotten, the Mills boys used to sing for pennies on the streets of Piqua, Ohio. Their radio debut at an Ohio station established them immediately as a radio sensation. They will be heard on an N. B. C. net this fall.

"Chasing Shadows" remains in first position in the selection of the 15 most popular songs of the last week and will be so treated in Lennie Hayton's Hit Parade, WRC, at 7 p. m. A brand-new tune will be introduced—"My Foolish Heart" and the old-timers featured include "Some of These Days" and "Little White Lies."

A strange scourge of death strikes the Indians, made wealthy by oil royalties! "G-Men" tonight, WRC, at 8, dramatizes the solution of the Osage murders as one of the authentic Bureau of Investigation stories . . . The piano team of Lillie and Martini, known for some time at New York's intimate show spots, makes its debut tonight at 7:30, WJSV, playing a special medley of Cole Porter compositions.

• • • •

Here is another fall show announcement: Walter O'Keefe will be presented in a new series of Caravan programs, October 1, with Deane Janis and Glen Gray's Orchestra. It will be presented twice a week over a Columbia net. Most of the radio smarties have been predicting for some time that Annette Hanshaw was gradually doing a radio nose-dive and whether the substitution of Miss Deane is the proof is unknown to me. It does look that way, however.

All the new shows are not scheduled for fall. "Evening in Paris," a new feature with a strangely familiar name, takes off on an N. B. C. net Monday, August 19. It will recreate the atmosphere of a Parisina night club, featuring Odette Myrtil, Pickens Sisters and Milton Watson. Mark Warnow's orchestra will supply the instrumental music.

WOL inaugurates a new weekly feature at 2:15 p. m., a critic's review of current motion pictures with Bob Hurleigh . . . WRC presents the eighth annual Mountain Dance and Music Festival finals from Asheville, N. C., at 9:30 p. m., with Fiddlin' Bill Hensley and string bands and singers galore . . . Bette Davis and Estelle Taylor share honors with Olin Dutra, golf expert, at the Chateau tonight with Al Jolson, WRC, at 8:30.

American club women have been researching radio intensively for some months. I have suspected that out of it all would come what appealed to the Women's National Radio committee as a perfect radio program.

It is now here. Or at least Mme. Yolando Mero-Irion, advisory chairman of the committee and chairman of radio of the National Council of Women, presents with the co-operation of the Columbia System, the first of a new series of Saturday matinee broadcasts entitled "The Music Box" this afternoon, WJSV, at 1. The program title certainly is conventional enough.

Talent includes Annette Gardner and Paula Hilbert, piano team; Marguerite Hawkins, soprano, and Alexis Tcherkassky, baritone. Highlights are a Bach chorale for two pianos, Staub's "L'Heure Silencieuse," Delibes' "Passepied," Pierne's "Le Moulin" and two Russian songs.

• • • •

George Jessel also appears on the Chateau program . . . The Arlington Futurity (hoss race) will be aired by WMAL, at 5 . . . WJSV has the Saratoga Handicap (more hoss race) at 3:45 . . . Senator Capper speaks on "Communism," WJSV, at 5.

The Cream of the Comic Crop . . .

. . . every Sunday in The Post!

THE COMIC STRIP, you know, has grown up. No longer do the heroes and heroines strive for humor by means of crude, slapstick methods. Gone are the black eyes, the rude exchange of flying pies . . . the "punch line" inevitably accompanied by a "Pam!" or a "Zowie!!"

THESE DAYS the best comic strip characters are personalities. Their adventures are astounding, unbelievable. They hold the spellbound attention of the whole family, from great-grandpa right down to little Johnnie, aged 5.

FOR EXAMPLE, there is Chester Gump, scion of the immortal Gump family, who is now experiencing the most startling adventures imaginable in the Far North; there is Joe Palooka, living an amazing dream of life in Ancient Rome; there is the stupendous Major Hoople, whose adventures, real and imaginary, would put the most extraordinary exploits of Baron Munchausen completely in the shade.

WHETHER YOU'RE six . . . or sixteen . . . or sixty . . . you'll enjoy The Post's Sunday Comic Supplement—a full-size, full color section designed solely for your amusement. You'll find Dick Tracy, Dixie Dugan, Winnie Winkle, Napoleon and Uncle Elby, Jane Arden, Gasoline Alley, Apple Mary, Alley Oop, the Bungle Family, the Gumps, Our Boarding House and other favorites each week. Be sure to see them tomorrow . . . Sunday . . . in
